Comptroller sees no reason to prosecute

WASHINGTON (AP) — The comptroller of the currency said today he found no reason to prosecute Budget Director Bert Lance or anyone else for several of Lance's private loans and overdrafts but questioned some of the banking practices involved.

The new report was on two of the lesser issues in the controversy over Lance's banking transactions. The comptroller is still preparing a report on Lance's use of bank aircraft and on the comptroller office's original investigation of Lance.

In his new report, Comptroller John Heimann traced a pattern of loans to Mr. and Mrs. Lance from the Fulton National Bank of Atlanta while Lance was president of the Calhoun, Ga., First National Bank.

As in some of Lance's other loans, the Calhoun bank had a "correspondent relationship" with the Fulton bank. This means the Calhoun bank deposited money without interest at the Fulton bank in exchange for services, a common banking practice. In each case, the comptroller's office has been trying to decide if Lance's bank kept extra money on deposit at the larger bank so Lance could get his loan.

The report said the Fulton bank "looked in some measure to the maintenance of

Wilson City man is critically wounded

Deputy Sheriff Robert Smith said today Leonard Wiley, 29, of Wilson City is in critical condition in the intensive care unit at the hospital, where he was taken following the shooting shortly before 10 p.m. Tuesday.

Wiley was shot once at close range with a .410 single-shot shotgun. The shot passed through his right arm into the right side of the chest.

Mason is being held in Mississippi County jail on a charge of felonious assault.

Circumstances leading to the shooting were not known this morning. Smith said Mason, who was arrested by Smith and Wyatt City Marshall John Pearson, was intoxicated at the time of the shooting and has been unable to provide information. Wiley has also been unable to tell authorities what led to the shooting.

Judge disqualifies self in murder trial

CARUTHERSVILLE — Pemiscot County Circuit Court Judge William Ragland disqualified himself Tuesday from presiding over the first-degree murder trial of Winston Eugene Holt, a Bragg City grocer charged with contracting for the killing of his wife.

Holt, 36, is accused of offering $1000 to his girlfriend's cousin, Roger Dale Jackson, 19, to murder Mrs. Joyce Holt on Nov. 23, 1976.

Judge Ragland, who called the disqualification "a matter of course" allowed defense counsel under Missouri law, said Circuit Court Judge Marshall Craig of Sikeston will be the presiding judge. A new date for the trial, which was set to begin today, has not yet been determined.

The motion for Ragland's disqualification was filed last week by Holt's attorney, Jim Ed Reeves of Caruthersville.

Holt was arrested several days after his wife's murder when 18-year-old Wanda McAllister, also of Bragg City, told deputies that Holt and she were lovers and that the grocer had planned to kill his wife because she refused to grant him a divorce.

Miss McAllister, granted immunity for her testimony at the preliminary hearing last December, said that Holt told her how he had failed at least five times to carry out the murder of his wife. She said his plans included drowning, electric shock and shooting, all arranged to look like accidents.

At the preliminary hearing, Miss McAllister's cousin, Roger Jackson, admitted to killing Mrs. Holt after Holt promised to erase his grocery debts. Jackson, then an unemployed farm laborer and the father of two small children, said he almost backed out of the deal at the last minute but feared Mrs. Holt wouldn't believe his story. He said he therefore shot her four times and ran.

Jackson, who is also awaiting trial for murder, is being held in the Pemiscot County jail after an escape attempt two weeks ago. Holt is free on a $2,500 property bond.

New industry breaks ground at E. Prairie

EAST PRAIRIE — Groundbreaking for C. B. Forms, Inc., 309 Mill St., the first industry to locate in the city's nine-acre industrial park, was held at 1 p.m. Tuesday.

Company personnel, city officials, Chamber of Commerce representatives and local businessmen were present for the groundbreaking ceremonyy.

Richard Bell of East Prairie is co-owner and president of the new firm, which will produce snap-out and continuous forms and specialty printing of optical character recognization (OCR) for computers and scanners. Jack Curran of St. Louis is also co-owner.

Con P. Curran Printing Co. of St. Louis will act as sales agency and will be the main supplier of sales.

Construction of the 100-by- 150-feet prefab metal building will start immediately and is expected to be completed in about six-weeks. The 15,000 feet building will have 1,500 feet of office space. McTigue Construction Co. of East Prairie is the contractor.

Bell said the company should begin production in about eight weeks, depending upon completion of construction, and plans call for employment of 20 persons by the end of the first year.

Bell has been in the printing business since 1961. He has been employed by Con P. Curran Printing Co., Holiday Press in Memphis, Tenn. and Witt Printing Co. of El Dorado Springs, where he was manager. Until recently Bell was vice president of Delta Business Forms of Cairo, Ill.

Bell and his wife, Sharon, have two sons, Todd and Scott Bell, and reside on South Martin Street, near the south city limits.

Burglars hit E. Prairie during power outage

A piece of clothesline wire was thrown into a transformer at the Missouri Utilities substation on DeField Street, causing the power outage on the west side of town, Abner said. Power was restored in about two hours.

Banks Body Shop on East Main Street was entered by twisting the front door lock. Money was taken from vending machines in the shop.

The front door lock at Mississippi County Gas and Oil Co., owned by Bill Adkison, was forced. An undetermined amount of money and a radio was taken from the office of the company, also located on East Main Street.

The fourth break-in occurred at Hall's Tavern on E. Main Street. The lock on a northside door was twisted off and money from vending machines, plus a large amount of cigarettes, were taken. Larry Smith is owner of the tavern.

Attempts were made to enter the Country Bumpkin Restaurant and Shell Service Station on Highway 80, near the west city limits. In both incidents attempts had beenmade to force backdoor locks.

Abner said day police officers were called on duty to assist night officers during the blackout. This is the second incident in recent weeks where break-ins have occurred during power outages that were deliberately caused, Abner said.

A complete report on the stolen items will not be available until inventories at the four businesses have been made. The investigation was continuing this morning, Abner said.

Hearing set on massage parlor issue

Attorneys of the city of Sikeston and the Scorpio Massage parlor, 1117 W. Malone Ave., will present arguments Sept. 14 during a preliminary injunction hearing before Judge Marshal Craig in Scott County Circuit Court at Benton.

The injunction seeks to prevent Sikeston from enforcing its new massage parlor ordinance, which sets strict guidelines for massage parlor operation.

Scorpio Massage is continuing to operate during the legal maneuvering. City officials says K's Massage Parlor, 233 W. Trotter St., has either closed or is inthe process of closing.

Proposed kindergarten clears another hurdle

The proposed new kindergarten for the Sikeston R-6 School District nearly hit a roadblock Tuesday night at the City Council meeting when a nearby property owner unsuccessfully insisted the council relocate the proposed extension of Salcedo Road.

The council was considering an ordinance approving the subdivision of the school site, when attorneys Joe and Bob Fuchs challenged the location of the proposed extension of Salcedo Road, which will lead to the new school.

They were representing their mother, who owns 103 acres between the Matthews property and Collins North Acres. The property is land-located with no roads leading into it.

Joe Fuchs did most of the arguing. He said the proposed extension of the Salcedo Road would logically continue due east from the kindergarten complex to Ingram Street.

That would put Salcedo Road about a block north of the Fuchs property line. Only two small streets, Spring and Plaza drives, would lead into the 103 acres.

Fuchs said the city plan shows Salcedo Road continuing east in a straight line from where it now ends on the west side of North Main Street. That would run the street through the Fuchs property.

Fuchs asked that the council refuse to agree to locate the school at that site and have it moved south so that Salcedo Road would extend into his mother's land; or to require that the street curve south to the north edge of the Fuchs property.

They pointed out that the city plan was not binding, that the Matthews donated the land where they wanted it to go, and that the council was only approving the road extension to the school, not all the way to Ingram Road.

Man, deposits missing

DEXTER — A wrrant charging embezzelment of $27,236.50 in cash and checks was issued Tuesday against Bob Corwin of Sikeston, according to Stoddard County Prosecuting Attorney Philip Ayers.

Corwin, an employe of the Wal-Mart Store at Dexter, was last seen Monday when leaving the store with money to deposit in the bank.

Ayers said the $27,236.50 represents four store deposits, which were to be made by Corwin on Saturday and for three deposits on Monday, which were handled by Corwin.

The whereabouts of Corwin is unknown at this time, according to the prosecutor.

Zoning issue comes back to council

A Sikeston realtor brought his request for a rezoning back tothe City Council Tuesday night for a second time, wanting to know why the request was denied.

The council approved paying the dues to the Bootheel Regional Planning Commission and adding a new engineering firm to the power plant project.

Rezoning

J. R. James, 733 Goodhope St., asked the Council for its reasons in rejecting his request to rezone his section of Goodhope Street from single family to commercial.

James, a realtor, wanted the change so he put a sign in front of his home advertising his business.

The Planning and Zoning Commision rejected his request in April. He appealed to the council, which also rejected the request.

Members of the council told James his request was rejected because it was poor planning.

Councilman Lewis Conley told him that residential areas have deteriorated in other parts of town because of rezonings such as James requested.

Mayor Eric Piel said the neighbors who had protested the proposal were not concerned with what James did with the property while he owned it, but with what would happen in the future.

A group of area residents are reportedly circulating a petition trying to get southern half of Goodhope returned to residential from its present multiple family zoning.

James wanted to know what the council would do. Conley said he would not commit himself, but would look favorably on it. Steve Sikes said he would not have voted to rezone the street from single family to multiple family in the first place.

BPRC dues

The council decided to pay its dues to the Bootheel Regional Planning Commission despite a substantial increase. The dues are for the new year are $3,380 up from $2,645 last year.

One reason for the dues increase, according to Ron Yersak of the commission is, that Stoddard County is not paying its dues this year.

The council had questioned paying the dues because the BPRC has done little for Sikeston and works mostly for smaller communities.

Along with the decision to pay the dues, the council decided to appoint a member to sit on the commission and represent Sikeston's interests. Mayor Piel will either sit on the commission or designate some one else.

Pat Lea and Yersak gave the council reports on the BPRC history and operations.

Power Plant

The council approved adding the engineering firm of Burns, McDonnell to the power plant design team. Phelps, Hogland Engineering will continue to head the engineering team.

Burns, McDonnell will provide most of the engineers and between 75 and 80 per cent of the design work.

The new firm was added for two reasons. Burns, McDonnell is a nationally known firm and can help the city get a lower interest rate on its bond issue and Phelps, Hogland is a small firm, which would have had to hire 30 or 40 engineers to handle the project.

The addition of the new firm will not increase the project's cost.

Paving projects

The Council approved a bid from W. S. McMullin Co. for the paving of Blanton Avenue at a cost of $8.50 per foot. McMullin was the only bidder.

The council gave the go ahead to call for bids for the paving of an alleysouth of the elderly housing project between School and Stoddard streets.

Building permits

City Manager Charles Church said that in 1976 the city issued 103 building permits for single family homes. In the first six months of this year, 99 permits have been issued.

Other action

The council approved transfer of a five per cent consumption beer license from King Arthur Lounge in the Kingsway Mall to Imperial Bowling Lanes.

The stability of a national economy may be measured by many means. One of the best measures is long range security assurance to the individual citizen.

Life insurance is one form of long range security. Individuals in the United States own more than a trillion dollars of life insurance.

This giant investment in the future is one of the major forces responsible for the progressive growth of the American economy. It is good evidence that the American is basically prudent and that immediate consumer spending rests on a good cushion of assets.

Ironically, the American insurance business is largely a creature of advertising. Although advertising has been blamed for causing unnecessary spending it may be credited with stimulating organized savings and financial security programs of fantastic scope.

Since the turn of the century, insurance companies have been among the largest and most consistent of advertisers. Insurance advertising has more than kept pace with the increase in per capita income. Even non-profit step to a final sales in consistent newspaper advertising.

Insurance companies, investment brokers, banks and savings associations use advertising just as a retailer does. The consumer needs information on how to save just as he does on how to spend.

ENVIRONMENTAL GOOD NEWS

Mother Nature is apparently tougher and more resilient than we think, at least as far as oil spills are concerned.

A study by Massachusetts Institute of Technology has found that the fragile ecologies of coastal areas can survive and, given enough time, recover from the effects of this kind of pollution.

There have never been more massive oil spills than occurred during World War II. In the first six months of 1942 alone, tankers sunk by German U-boats dumped more than 3.4 million barrels of oil and gasoline off the Atlantic coast.

This is five times more oil than was involved in history's worst single spill, the Torrey Canyon disaster off England in 1967, and 20 times the cargo carried by the Argo Merchant, which broke up off Massachusetts last December.

The MIT study, which was funded by a grant from the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, focused on two areas hit by the wartime spills: Ocracoke Island, N.C., where more than 160,000 barrels came ashore, and northern New Jersey coast waters, which were sheared with 264,000 barrels.

The researchers found that in both cases, "regional wildlife and economy (fishing) survived with minimal difficulty."

This is immensely encouraging, but no cause for complacency. What it really means is that the only reason we did not long ago damage vast stretches of the world's coastlines beyond repair is not because of human wisdom but thanks to sheer dumb luck.

There are limits to the environment's capacity to absorb and rebound from human abuse. If we have fortunately not exceeded them in the case of oil spills, we may be pressing dangerously close in other areas.

COMPLIANCE IS UP TO STATES

As Congress wrestles with the decision to grant the automakers a postponement of stringent new pollution standards — scheduled to go into effect on 1978 model cars— it is important to keep one thing in mind.

It is not, as some people have irresponsibly claimed, a matter of permitting the industry "to go on building dirty cars." The industry has been building progressively cleaner cars since the mid-1960s, when the first emission-control devices began to be installed, and especially since passage of the Clear Air Act in 1970.

Even if the 1978 requirements were postponed indefinitely—which they won't be— the average level of automobile-generated poolutants would continue to decline as older cars were retired to the scrapyard.

Rather, it is becoming a question of just how much we may realistically expect from automotive technology in refining the conventional internal-combustion engine, and whether we may be reaching the point where the costs of doing so begin to outweigh the benefits.

The 1978 standards, if achieved, would bring us close to the level of zero emissions. This is a goal devoutly to be wished, but the closer we get to it— with automobiles or anything else—the more elusive it becomes.

The first 90 percent of the job of cleaning up any kind of pollution is relatively easy. The next five per cent is tough, but still possible. It's the last few percentage points where things begin to get sticky and where we have to start thinking about other priorities—the need to keep factories, mills, and mines operating, to keep people working, the urgent need to conserve energy and natural resources.

By all means, Congress should continue to sit on the auto companies until the 1978 statutory standards are achieved, or until it is proved conclusively that they are not feasible. It is clear that we would not have come as far as we have had it not been for the law's force-feeding of pollution-control technology.

Yet there is something Congress could do right now that would bring far greater and more immediate benefits for the public health: It could require that all states conduct periodic inspections of every vehicle on the road to insure that they are in compliance with the emission standards of their particular model year.

It is one thing to crank out cars meeting certain memission specifications on the assembly line. But if there is no follow-up, if nothing is done to see that people maintain their cars to these specifications, not a great deal has really been accomplished.

The British Monarchy:
Queen Elizabeth II
'Bastion Against Naked Power'

(SET ITAL) Lord Home, former British Prime Minister, is Victor Riesel's guest columnist today. Here he discusses the Queen's role in protecting British democracy and as a unifying influence in the Commonwealth.
(END ITAL)
By Lord Home of the Hirsel
British Prime Minister, 1963-64

LONDON – Britain has a long experience of monarchy and, as the Silver Jubilee celebrations have proved, the institution is well founded on popular respect and affection for the present holder of the office -- Queen Elizabeth II.

There have, of course, been profound changes in the nature and style of the monarchy since the Stuarts tried to assert the doctrine of the Divine Right of Kings. The constitutional changes since the 17th century have always been concerned with limiting the power of the executive and asserting the control of the elected Parliament. The result has been that the ability of the Crown to dictate or to promote policies has been modified to a point where the monarch always acts on the advice of her ministers.

The Queen, under the constitution, still has the power to dismiss Parliament or to refuse its advice, but no monarch would in practice invoke such powers except under circumstances which are virtually unforeseeable.

Paradoxically, in this century, as the actual power of the Crown has declined its influence on public opinion has increased. The public has become concerned about some of the aspects of democracy, and in particular the ability of sectional groups to grasp power and to use it on occasions against the interest of the majority of the poeple.

For example, an overbearing attitude on the part of a large trade union could be as tyrannical as that of any of the earlier kings.

So the British people, who throughout history have been peculiarly sensitive to their democratic rights, approve of a monarch who is above politics and who could be their safeguard against a return in different guise of anked power.

The British public prefer the monarchy to a presidency for the reason that a president is in most cases a half-political animal. The strength of the Queen in comtemporary history is that she is above the party political battle.

There is a more personal reason for the increased prestige of the Crown. King George V and the present Queen's parents, King George VI and Queen Elizabeth, proved themselves to be exemplary public servants.

The Queen and her husband Prince Philip, Duke of Edinburgh, have carried on that tradition and adapted the monarchy to changing social conditions with sensitivity and skill. So both in a constitutional and in a personal sense the Crown has interpreted the mood of the day.

The facet of the British monarchy which others seem to find it difficult to understand is the role of the Queen as Head of the Commonwealth. On the face of it this is an anachronism, but in practice the relationship works and has its value in terms of Britain's international relations.

What is more, the 19th century interpretation of British colonialism was liberal in the sense that from the start training was given to the indigenous peoples of Africa, Asia and the West Indies in the arts of administration and government. Once that process started, ultimate independence for the territories was assured.

Certainly mistakes were made, but overall the transition from despotic Empire to a Commonwealth of free and equal partners was remarkably smooth and power was transferred with the minimum of friction and the maximum of goodwill.

In the evolution of the colonies there were certain features of constitutional and political development which tended to promote a common outlook and mutual interests. The concept of the separation of the roles of the political executive from the Courts of Justice, the rights of the individual under the law, the transition of the franchise to one man, one vote, were all aspects of the Westminster pattern of democracy and corresponded with the ambitions of people everywhere.

In the old Commonwealth these techniques were directly inherited and in the new Commonwealth they were adopted so that to some extent there was a family atmosphere among those concerned with working a common experiment in democracy.

The question was: could the royal link be retained in the new conditions? All the odds seemed to be against it, especially when India became a republic.

But the ties were strong enough to hold, and Mr. Nehru, then Prime Minister of India, felt that he was able to accept the British monarch's style and title of "The Queen – Head of the Commonwealth."

This concept has proved a symbol of unity in a highly diversified association of nations. It is a typically British compromise which others find it difficult to comprehend and about the value of which they sometimes express considerable scepticism.

But in fact it has tangible values. There is a Commonwealth Parliamentary Association of which all the countries are members and which is universally popular with them.

There are regular meetings of all the prime ministers and finance ministers of the Commonwealth. They meet to review the relationship between the different partners and to survey world affairs. In these Commonwealth discussions and debates there is no veto. Decisions are by consensus.

In a world of division and danger there is value in such an association. One of the great assets to Britain is that after reigning for 25 years the Queen has an intimate knowledge of all the Commonwealth personalities, whom she has met as often in their own lands as she has at home.

So in this Jubilee year we in Britain count our blessings.

A federal judge recently held unconstitutional a New Jersey law requiring public school students to stand during the pledge of allegiance to the American flag. The judge did not justify this by a written opinion, but announced it orally.

In making this decision, the judge said he was extending the U.S. Supreme Court decision of 1943 which held that a student could not be compelled to recite the pledge of allegiance against his will.

The 1st Amendment right of free speech was the issue in that case.

The purpose of this test is to prevent the unfair competition that would result if men masquerading as women were permitted to enter the women's athletic events.

Richards is 6 feet 2 and obviously has a big advantageover the women tennis stars such as Tracy Austin who is only 5 feet tall.

When a male-female competition was staged last year by television promoters, tremendous handicaps had to be imposed on the men to make the game fair. The male players were allowed only one serve, required to hit in the singles court, and forbidden to rush the net. The female players were allowed two serves and permitted to hit in the alleys.

Apparently, the New York judge believes that he is better able to determine whether a person is really a man or a woman than the internationally accepted physical test, and that, based on his conclusion, he then has the right to tell privately financed athletic associations whom they must permit to compete.

When judges give speeches at public meetings, they often complain about their heavy work load, their backlog of cases and how their salaries have not kept pace with inflation. It usually takes years for any case to get to trial.

Part of the problem could be solved if the judges would refrain from assuming such tasks as deciding whether teachers may tell their pupils to stand up or sit down, and who must be allowed to compete in privately financed tennis tournaments.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

by Jack Anderson
and Les Whitten

WASHINGTON — Senate Minority Leader Howard Baker, R-Tenn., rounded up enough fellow Republicans recently to block public financing of Senate elections. He also concocted a slick scheme to raise private funds for those same Republicans.

The able and agile Baker signed his name to a fund-raising letter which discussed the need for a strong national defense. The need for campaign funds was barely mentioned. The letter was mailed to about one million well heeled prospects.

A detailed questionnaire, identified as the "1977 National Defense Survey," was enclosed in the same envelope. "I've gone ahead and registered a special survey number in your name," explained Baker, "... so that the results can be tabulated accurately and quickly."

The Senate Republican leader continued urgently: "I personally believe this is NOT the time to gamble, in any way, with our national defenses ... But I want to know what you think. That's why I've sent you this specially numbered survey assigned for your personal use."

Oh yes, $300,000 had to be raised, Baker added, to fund two top priority projects: "(1) distribute nationally the 1977 SURVEY ON NATIONAL DEFENSE to thousands of Americans and (2) elect Republicans to the U.S. Senate who'll vote to keep our defense strong."

The questionnaires and the checks began rolling in this summer. The checks were processed by the Bank of Virginia, which carefully deposited the money and kept a list of contributors. But those top-priority questionnaires were dumped unceremoniously into the trash.

Sources at the bank told us that 20,000 to 30,000 questionnaires were discarded without bothering to tabulate the results. It looked suspiciously as if the defense survey were merely a gimmick to raise campaign funds, being that it's easier to extract money from the citizenry in the name of patriotism than politics.

Our reporter Vance Hawthorne confronted GOP officials with the allegations that, once the checks had been carefully removed from the envelopes, the urgent survey results were thrown in the trash. "Completely inaccurate," retorted the officials.

Our sources, nevertheless, stuck by their story. One furnished us with a sworn affidavit declaring: "I was assigned to the mailing services section of the Bank of Virginia where I was put to work ... processing mail for the Republican National Senatorial Committee. I was directed by my supervisor to throw away the surveys involved in the mailing."

Immediately after our inquiries, our sources reported, the check processors were issued new instructions to begin saving the questionnaires. We went back to the GOP. This time a spokesman acknowledged that 20,000 to 30,000 questionnaires had been discarded because of a "misunderstanding."

Three bank sources assured us, however, that there had been no misunderstanding. The bank had received explicit instructions, they insisted, to throw out the questionnaires.

Since the names and addresses had been filed, the Republicans have now followed up quietly with a new letter to those whose questionnaires were deposited in the trash. This letter is signed not by Baker but by Robert Moore, the executive director of the campaign committee.

"Unfortunately, due to a processing error," he explains, "the original survey assigned to your name was not tabulated. And that really concerns me."

Now, the survey results are being tabulated, albeit belatedly. So are the contributions, which have already reached about $250,000. The money is being distributed in $10,000 bundles to Republican senators who are running for re-election next year.

Social Security Mess: We receive dozens of letters and calls every day from citizens who complain that the Social Security system has short-changed them. The agency is so bound up in red tape and confusing regulations that the frustrated claimants are often cheated out of money owed to them by the government.

We receive far too many complaints for our small staff to investigate. The best we can do is to make random inquiries. We heard, for example, from Dorothy Lopez whose husband, Joe, had been injured on a construction job helping to save another man's life in a fall from an unsafe scaffold. Joe Lopez was so severely injured that he was forced to quit work.

In 1975, he applied for disability benefits from Social Security. He had a right to these benefits, which should have been granted without a hassle. Instead, he was denied benefits three times, then granted a measly $136 monthly allotment to maintain his family of three. Only $4.40 a month was allowed, for example, to raise his son.

Dorothy Lopez spent the next 18 months fighting Social Security officials for a just allotment. They gave her the runaround until she finally wrote to us in desperation. "No one seems to care," she wrote wearily. "It's all covered up."

We found that the Lopez family was entitled to three times what they had been paid. Embarrassed officials admitted that Dorothy had been right all along. Result: Their monthly check was increased to over $400.

But millions of other Americans are not so fortunate. Congressional sources say eligible persons often receive nothing, while those not entitled to payments find ways to squeeze money out of the cumbersome Social Security system.

Todays News In Brief

Eskimos face tougher winter

BARROW, Alaska (AP) — The Eskimos, who have survived 2,000 Arctic winters through subsistence hunting, could face tougher winters if a ban is upheld on killing the bowhead whale, which is on the endangered species lists. The International Whaling Commission, meeting in June in Australia, unanimously approved a ban on killing — including subsistence hunting — of the bowhead, a slow-moving mammal whose head is almost a third of its length.

Carter aid asked in Park case

WASHINGTON (AP) — Atty. Gen. Griffin Bell is asking President Carter to help return South Korean businessman Tongsun Park to the United States to face a trial in connection with alleged influencebuying in Congress. Bell, describing Park as "a fugitive from American justice", made his appeal to the President on Tuesday. "We're ready to go to trial immediately," said Bell of Park, who has been named in a 36-count felony indictment on charges of bribery and corruption.

Treaty to be signed tonight

WASHINGTON (AP) —After 13 years of negotiations, the United States and Panama will sign a treaty tonight that would would turn the waterway over to the Panamanians by the year 2000. But the treaty-signing ceremony doesn't guarantee that the negotiators' agreements will stand. The treaty must still be approved by the Senate and by the Panamanian voters in a plebescite.

Taiwan breakoff vow claimed

PEKING (AP) — Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-ping says President Ford promised to break diplomatic relations with Taiwan if he was elected, but the Carter administration offered only to reduce the American embassy there to a liaison mission in exchange for full ties with Peking. At a meeting Tuesday with 13 executives and directors of The Associated Press, Teng said efforts to normalize U.S.-Chinese relations suffered a setback during the visit of Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance.

Holiday toll climbs to 469

A total of 469 persons died in traffic accidents nationwide over the three-day Labor Day weekend.

The Labor Day count, which started at 6 p.m. Friday and ended at midnight Monday local time, was one less than the National Safety Council's estimate of between 470 and 570 deaths.

During a three-day non-holiday weekend in late summer, about 400 persons would die in traffic, the council said.

During the 1976 Labor Day holiday period, there were 501 traffic fatalities. The worst toll was in 1968 when 688 persons were killed.

Memphis to get Elvis statue

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Plans have been announced to build a 25-foot bronze statue of Elvis Presley which will be given to the city by the Memphis Development Foundation.

Joe Pipkin, president of the Mid+South Fair Association, and real estate developer Dan Wilkinson said Tuesday the 50-ton statue would be financed with private funds and built on a site that has not been selected.

Donations will be accepted to finance the tribute to Presley, who died Aug. 16 at age 42.

Pennsylvania sculptor Eric Parks has been commissioned for the statue, which should be completed in about two years.

Carter pledges jobs priority

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter, after citing "horrible figures" on unemployment among young blacks, told the Congressional Black Caucus today he now is putting a higher priority on jobs programs.

Rep. Parren Mitchell, D+Md., the caucus chairman, told reporters after the session that Carter showed discernable movement toward support of a compromise Humphrey+Hawkins employment bill favored by the black legislators.

Mitchell said Carter promised to have key economic and labor advisers report to him within 10 days about prospects for fashioning a bill the administration could support. The present bill would set a goal of reducing unemployment, now listed at 7.1 per cent by the Labor Department, to 3 per cent within four years through a variety of federal programs to stimulate private hiring.

Kidnaper demands announced

COLOGNE, West Germany (AP) — The kidnapers of industrialist Hanns Martin Schleyer have demanded release of 11 jailed terrorists, $478,500 ransom and a flight out of the country for the freed prisoners, security officials said today.

But the deadlines set by the kidnapers "can no longer be met," Interior Minister Karl Schiess of Baden+Wuerttemberg state said.

Security sources said the kidnapers had warned that their demands must be met by this afternoon.

The officials said 100,000 marks — $43,500 — was demanded for each of the prisoners to be released.

He said the federal government would have to decide whether to free the prisoners. A cabinet meeting was under way in Bonn.

Legislative leaders hopeful

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Missouri's legislative leaders say they are hopeful a 10-member negotiating committee may soon be able to make some progress toward resolving the stalemate on the $140 million building bill.

The special legislative session called to work out the huge capital improvements bill has recessed, while the conference committee members continue to informally work out a version of the bill agreeable to both the House and Senate.

The senators approved a $145 million measure, while the House voted for a $142 million bill.

The matter was sent to the conference committee, but the lawmakers soon reached an impasse and the state legislators went home.

However, legislative leaders Tuesday said they were optimistic the informal discussion on the bill had paved the way for a breakthrough.

Rep. Wayne Goode, D+Normandy, and chairmman of the House Appropriations Committee said the conference committee might be able to meet "either this week or next week" to begin consideration of a final compromise.

CIRCUIT COURT

NEW MADRID — Twelve persons pleaded guilty to criminal charges Tuesday before Judge William L. Ragland on the opening day of the September Term of New Madrid County Circuit Court.

James Frank Muse of Portageville was granted probation with supervision when he pleaded guilty to possession of stolen property and was sentenced to a two-year term in custody of the Department of Corrections. Muse was accused of having in his possession on Feb. 23, one 1974 model pickup truck that belonged to Claude Knowles which Muse allegedly knew had been stolen.

Marvin Hufford of Gideon Route One and Delbert Lawrence of Tallapoosa both pleaded guilty to burglary and stealing charges stemming from a burglary on July 23 at a shed in Gideon and the theft of copper tubing and a gas stove. Both defendants were granted probation with supervision after receiving consecutive two-year sentences on each charge.

Thomas Lee Crook of Charleston Route Two was placed on probation withsupervision when he pleaded guilty and was sentenced to a two-year term on a felonious stealing charge. Crook was accused of stealing one coat, one pair of pants and a bed sheet from Graber's Dept. Store in Sikeston on Dec. 28, 1976.

Byron Pride of Portageville pleaded guilty to burglary and stealing charges and was placed on probation under supervision, after receiving consecutive two-year terms on each charge. He was accused of burglarizing Combs Daisy Queen in Portageville on May 8 and the theft of $125, and merchandise valued together at $200.

Probation under supervision was granted to George Stanley Harrington and Lindell Floyd Pind of Portageville who pleaded guilty to first degree burglary and stealing and were each sentenced to two-year terms on each charge to run concurrently. They were charged with burglarizing the home of Thomas Harrington on July 21, and the theft of one digital clock radio, two small speakers, jewelry and jewelry box, one 410-guage shotgun, one .22 caliber rifle and two BB guns.

Shed B. Wright of Howardville pleaded guilty to a charge of stealing less than $50 and was given a one-year suspended jail sentence upon payment of costs and during good behavior. Wright had been charged along with three other defendants with burglarizing the Howardville School on June 25 and the theft of various school equipment.

Roy Marshall and James Vent pleaded guilty to stealing less than $50, reduced from robbery from a person, and were both given one-year jail sentences that were suspended upon payment of costs, during good behavior and restitution was ordered. The men were accused of taking approximately $8 from Joe Treadwell Jr. on May 2.

Milton Carter was given a one-year suspended jail sentence upon payment of costs and during good behavior after pleading guilty to child molestation of a 10-year old boy on June 12.

Allen Louis Howard, charged with exhibiting a dangerous and deadly shotgun in the presence of Deputy Sheriff Bud Reis on May 19 was sentenced to one year in jail, which was suspended upon payment of costs and during good behavior.

The Sikeston Bulldogs ended their third full week of practice Friday at the high school gridiron and the boys and coaches are optimistic about their chances of capturing their 10th Big Eight championship.

Malden — The Malden Green Wave will be playing under a new head football coach this year. Bob Blue has assumed duties as head coach of the once powerful Malden grid squad that finished ahead of East Prairie in the Little Six conference last only because they won one conference game and East Prairie didn't.

Cooking Up With Cherie

By Cherie Blanton

Butterfly Lamb

Have the butcher bone and butterfly the leg of lamb. Rub the seasonings into the meat and rub in the oil. Let the roast marinate at least one hour before broiling. Put it 8 inches from the heat for 40 minutes, fat side up; turn and cook for 10 minutes.

Seasonings

4-6 pound leg of lamb
½ tsp. each of oregano, beau monde, fine herbs season-all, chopped parsley, broken bay leaf
¼ tsp. each of lemon peel, garlic powder
¼ cup of olive oil

Scalloped Asparagus with Artichokes

1-14 oz. can cut green asparagus, drained
1-14 oz. can artichoke hearts, drain but save juice
2-4 oz. can mushrooms, drained
4 heaping TBS butter
4 heaping TBS flour
2 cups milk
½ cup artichoke juice
1 tsp. seasoning salt
salt and pepper to taste
¼ pound grated cheese

Place vegetables (halve artichokes) in layers in a casserole. Melt butter, blend in flour, slowly add milk and juice, stir to make a heavy cream sauce. Add seasonings and half of the cheese to the sauce. Pour over vegetables. Top with rest of cheese and bake 25 minutes at 350 degrees.

Fruited Cream Salad

1 pkg. orange jello
1 pt. vanilla ice cream
1 small jar marschino cherries, drained and cut
1 large can drained crushed pineapple
1 cup boiling water
1 cup chopped pecans

Savory Casserole Bread

2-thirds cup chopped green onion with tops
3 TBS salad oil
1 cup chopped cooked ham or corned beef
2 eggs, slightly beaten
½ tsp. prepared mustard
2 TBS sesame seeds
2 eggs
2 cups biscuit mix
2 cups milk
1½ cups grated sharp cheddar
3 TBS melted butter

Saute onion in 1 TBS oil for 2 minutes. Combine ham and biscuit mix. Mix oil, eggs, milk, onions, and half the cheese. Add to ham and mix. Spread in a greased round 10 inch metal pan or iron skillet. Sprinkle with rest of cheese and seeds. Pour butter over top. Bake at 375 degrees for 35 to 40 minutes.

Now, fix your favorite dessert and call the neighbors in.

Weddings to come

O'Neal-Wisdom

Tammy O'Neal and Gregory Edward Wisdom

Mrs. Nancy O'Neal of Sikeston and Jim O'Neal of Morley announce the engagement of their daughter Tammy to Gregory Edward Wisdom. Wisdom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Clyde "Peck" Wisdom of Sikeston.

Tammy is a 1977 graduate of Sikeston High School where she participated in Red Peppers, choir and DECA.

Wisdom is a 1977 graduate of Sikeston High School and was a member of VICA and DECA.

The couple plans a December 2 wedding.

Hunter-Fick

NEW MADRID -- Mr. and Mrs. Samuel L. Hunter Jr. announce the engagement of their daughter, Linda Leah to Robert C. Fick. Fick is the son of Mrs. Cletus F. Fick and the late Mr. Fick of St. Louis.

Miss Hunter is a graduate of Gwynedd-Mercy College with an A.D. in nursing. She is presently employed at the University of Missouri Medical Center at Columbia as a diabetes nurse practitioner.

Fick is a graduate of the University of Missouri at Rolla where he received a bachelor of science degree in mechanical engineering and was associated with AT&T for three years before entering law school. He received his Juris Doctorate from the University of Missouri at Columbia and is currently employed as the city attorney of Cape Girardeau.

A late October wedding is planned.

Getting married?

The Daily Standard, 205 S. New Madrid St., now has new wedding forms available at the front office or at the women's desk. Business hours are from 7 a.m., to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday. Forms will be mailed if a self-addressed, stamped envelope is provided.

The deadline for weddings is three weeks after date of wedding. Pictures will be returned if a self-addressed, stamped envelope large enough to hold a picture is supplied. Color pictures are discouraged. There is no charge for running a wedding

Higher prices at markets prompts usage of more flour

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

The high prices of 1973 and 1974 which prompted people to cut down the use of convenience foods have left a legacy in the form of continued interest in baked goods and other "do-it-from-scratch" types of food.

Government statistics show that per capita consumption of wheat flour in the United States declined steadily from 118 pounds in 1960 to 108 pounds in 1974. The trend was reversed in 1975, however, and estimated per capita consumption of wheat flour for 1976 was 111 pounds.

Not all of the increase, of course, is due to more home-baked cakes and breads. A spokesman for the Wheat Flour Institute pointed out that Americans are eating more and more hamburgers every year. More hamburgers means more buns. And more buns means more wheat flour.

It is too soon to tell what the picture for 1977 will show. But some industry sources predict steady interest in home baking and consumers will find that they can save money and time if they learn what types of flours are available and which ones do what.

There are three parts to a kernel of wheat. The inner part, or endosperm, is the part which is ground to make white flour which accounts for more than 90 per cent of the flour milled in the United States.

The other two parts are the bran or outer layer and the germ — the part which would sprout. The bran and the germ are removed from white flour, but are left in whole wheat flour.

Revival planned

CONRAN -- The Trailway Sisters of Sarasota Florida will be holding a revival from Sunday Sept. 11 to Sunday Sept. 18 at the Full Gospel Meeting House. The revivals will run 7:30 p.m. nightly.

The sisters, Hope, 24, and Lisa, 18, Thornton have been traveling in the United States for the past 8 years.

The public is invited.

POLLY'S POINTERS

Store fur coat in sheet

DEAR POLLY — My two daughters and I all bought fake fur coats last winter but we were not given any instructions concerning their care over the summer. Someone advised us not to put plastic garment bags over the coats so I hope you or some reader who has such a coat can give us some advice. — AGNES.

DEAR AGNES — When making inquiries for you I found conflicting opinions concerning the plastic garment bags but it was suggested that you cover such a coat with a sheet. The main thing is to have such a coat cleaned so there is no danger of moths getting to work on them. — POLLY.

Dear Ann Landers

Reader hates short-lived nylons

Dear Ann Landers: Since your column is the world's bulletin board for gripes, both petty and grand, may I have my say?

What man would tolerate socks that had to be replaced every week or ten days? You would think an industry that can produce fabrics and fibres for the moon could come up with a no-run stocking for women.

We like nylons, We feel undressed without them. But as long as women keep buying this inferior product the manufacturers will think it's what we want. Well, it's NOT what we want. We want some wear for our money.

Where does one start? Ann Landers? Ralph Nader? The Better Business Bureau? Perhaps since nylon is a petroleum byproduct and tons of it go into weekly trash cans across America, we should write to our Congressmen. Or do we ask the Japanese to come up with something better? -- Irked

Dear Irked: Haven't you heard of "planned obsolescence"? It's the simple technique of putting things together so they will fall apart and have to be replaced.

I assure you American fabric companies already know how to make run-resistant nylons for women, but why kill the goose that lays all those golden eggs?

Are you willing to go barelegged as a protest? I'm not. So stuck is stuck -- and that's what we are.

Dear Ann Landers: Next year our parents will celebrate their 50th wedding anniversary. They are very big on outward appearances -- highly social. The world thinks they are so charming and refined. But the truth is they are a pair of House Devils. The never-ending carping at each other kept our family in constant turmoil. My sister and I left home as soon as it was legal to do so. Whenever we go to see our parents we can count on a ruined day. The fighting is incessant. The demands they make on each other, and on us, are terrible.

Now they are beginning to talk about the upcoming anniversary. They want a huge party. My sister and I don't see how we could give a party to celebrate such a phony relationship. May we hear from you? -- Big Brother

Dear Brother: What do you want to hear from me? If you and your sister don't want to give your parents a party for their 50th wedding anniversary -- don't do it. I suspect you have some guilt over this -- and that's the problem that needs to be resolved.

Dear Ann: A recent letter sounds like my mother wrote it. It contained her favorite word three times. "Prestige."

She is always on my back because my friends have no "prestige." Dad's associates have no "prestige." Even our parish priest doesn't have it.

Mom knows Dad has a lady on the side. We guessed it because Mom and Dad have had separate bedrooms for two years. Mom thinks this is "prestige."

Their marriage is a farce but they stay together "for us kids." We wish they'd split. What can we do? (P.S. What does prestige mean anyway?) -- Us'uns

Dear Us: You can do nothing. It's between the two principals.

Prestige means "one's standing in the eyes of other people -- reputation." Buy Mom a dictionary for Christmas or her birthday -- whichever comes first.

Don't get burned by a "line" that's too hot to handle. Play it cool with Ann Landers' guide to "necking and Petting -- What Are the Limits?" Send your request to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Ill. 60611, enclosing 50 cents in coin and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope.

You can cut down on foam when you are cooking dry beans or peas by adding a tablespoon of fat (for each cup of the legumes) to the cooking water. This method is particularly helpful when a pressure cooker is used. Great Northern, red kidney and pinto beans all benefit from this method; however, it does not help to keep lima beans from foaming.

When a recipe calls for 1-3rd cup of crisply cooked crumbled bacon, cooking 4 slices of the bacon usually gives the amount needed.

Cooking school is for everyone

They come by the dozens, socres, hundreds. They are brides who are just beginning to cook. They are homemakers who have had a reputation for fine cooking for decades. They are men who are discovering the relaxation and fun of puttering with pots and pans.

Why do they come? "Because it's such a great evening," some say. "Because I learn so much... new ways of doing things..short cuts," say other. "Because I get ideas for menus that are out of the ordinary." "Because this school snaps me out of the old rut when I can't think of any thing different to cook," says a seasoned homemaker. "Because I get such different to cook," says a seasoned homemaker. "Because I get such wonderful ideas for entertaining" says a hostess. And some come mainly to have a chance to win one of the many valuable door prizes.

They are talking about the Progressive Farmer's kitchens cooking School which will be held September 8 7:30 p.m. Sikeston Fieldhouse. Tickets are free while they last at local stores displaying the cooking school posters. But it is important to have tickets in advance and for ticket holders to come early as the doors will be opened to fill the seats with non-ticket holders ten minutes before show time. Judging from past experience, dont' expect empty seats. We want you to come -- but come early. Auditoriums nearly always fill to standing room only.

This year the SOUTHERN KITCHENS Cooking program will feature everything from quick-AS-A-SNAP MICROWAVE COOKERY AND TIPS ON THE Chinese wok to old favorites such as pumpkin bread -- made a very new way. There will be lots of tips on short cuts and budget helpers. New twists on old favorites. Party ideas, dinner and supper menus to take the problems out of planning.

When Phyliss Young is on stage there is never a dull moment. Backed by her Program Co-Ordinator Beth Hawes the art of cooking is fast paced and fun.

Because of the demand for tickets it is imperative to pick them up from local merchants as early as possible. That not only ensures admission but a possibility of winning one of the valuale prizes.

Jazz violin stylist still going at 79

SEATTLE (AP) — Joe Venuti is 79 years old, 55 years into developing a personal style of playing jazz on the violin.

He still makes the rounds of jazz festivals and night clubs across the country. He's still performing, still learning.

"You can't stop. You can't slow down," he said in a interview. "You've got to keep going.

"A guy retires, he's 65, you don't have a vocation ... if you're inventive, that's the whole deal," he said. "Just working — that's my favorite thing."

In a recent two-week appearance here, he played three vigorous sets a night, displaying every kind of bowing technique imaginable on tunes ranging from "Take the A-Train" to "Honeysuckle Rose" to "Rhapsody in Blue" to "Body and Soul."

One set opened with a belly dancer named Zephara. He responded by working into his improvisation a few of the violin passages in Rimsky-Korsakov's symphonic work, "Scheherazade".

For a country-flavored rendition of "Honeysuckle Rose", he was joined by "my protege," violinist John Phillips of Bellingham.

Oblivious to bar noise, he consistently produced the clear tone, sharp pizzicato and smooth bowing that reflect his classical training.

Venuti, a native of Lecco, Italy, says he began violin lessons at the Milan Conservatory when he was 4 years old.

At 12, he moved to the United States, joining his mother and sister in New Orleans. He said the first time he heard jazz, "it was just like country music to me."

He remained a classical musician, joining the Philadelphia Symphony and later the Detroit Symphony. But in 1925, he began four years playing "on and off" with the Goldkette Band in Detroit.

That was the turning point. "Jazz Encyclopedia" author Leonard Feather calls Venuti "the first great jazz violinist of the 1920s."

"I made more money playing jazz," says Venuti.

He worked nine years with Paul Whiteman's orchestra, formed his own band, played for 12 years with Bing Crosby and made the rounds of cocktail lounges in the West for a number of years.

In the late 1960s he began getting wider recognition with performances at major jazz festivals, and in 1970 he was named to the Newport Hall of Fame at the Newport Jazz Festival in New York.

From his first days as a student in Milan, he said, he played the same Santo Serafin violin until it was stolen from a Syracuse, N.Y., hotel two years ago. Now he uses his son's 1734 Imbeci.

Nobel Prize nomination elates Lewis

KENOSHA, Wis. (AP) — "I'm very proud," said comedian Jerry Lewis upon learning that he has been nominated for the Nobel Peace Prize by Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis.

"Whether you win or lose, just to be in that company is magnificent," the entertainer said by telephone from Las Vegas, where he is appearing at the Hotel Sahara.

Aspin, who described Lewis as "a man for all seasons, all people and all times" whose name "has, in the hearts of millions, become synonymous with peace, love and brotherhood" said he nominated Lewis at the request of Kenneth Mills of Kenosha.

Mills, assistant director of instruction at Gateway Technical Institute, cited Lewis' work in raising over $65 million in annual telethons over the past 11 years for muscular dystrophy as one of the reasons for the nomination.

Casino projects hit Reno

RENO, Nev. (AP) — The skyline of this once sleepy city in northern Nevada most well known for divorce has the look of big money these days.

Looming just east of downtown is the MGM Grand Hotel Casino — the world's biggest casino — scheduled for opening next year. It's costing about $114 million and investors expect a quick return.

In addition, seven other hotel-casino projects are under way in the "Biggest Little City in the World."

The reason for the boom? It's gambling, Nevada's biggest business. As one gaming official put it, "They aren't building all those new casinos because gambling is a losing operation."

But with development has come concern the area can't handle the rapid growth, can't supply water and necessary services — and isn't emotionally ready for the boom.

"Now it's growing so fast here that ordinary working people who'll get those new jobs being created won't be able to afford a house," said Barbara Bennett, who ran unsuccessfully for the City Council as an opponent of the building boom.

Nevertheless, hammerhead cranes and the steel skeletons of highrise buildings mark the downtown area. Besides the MGM, Del Webb's Primadonna is being joined by the $37 million Sahara Reno, in Sparks, John Ascuaga's Nugget is working on a sizable expansion, and so is Harrah's in downtown Reno.

City officials say much of the construction money is coming from Reno and its banks. Investors have known for years that solid gaming operations in central Reno are money-makers. Harrah's, for example, announced recently its earnings for the 1976-77 fiscal year were $4 million more than the year before.

Those who want to see Reno stay the way it was, with guest ranches and lots of room on the meandering Truckee River, say development is causing a growth pattern the area can't handle.

With completion of the work will come an estimated 10,000 jobs, officials estimate, and experts predict those people could require 40,000 more service-related jobs in the future. Reno's population today is about 170,000, and forecasts indicate another 30,000 residents by 1980.

For a while this year, building in the Truckee Meadows residential area was halted by city councils in Reno and neighboring Sparks. Both held there wasn't enough capacity in the cities' joint sewer plant to accommodate new customers.

Businessmen, builders and unions were up in arms. Before the move, residents of both cities voted down a $7 million bond issue to double the size of the sewer plant. The issue came up again after the building moratorium and passed.

Betty Crocker Cooking on the Trail

So you're going to rough it this vacation and do your cooking over an open fire? Well, don't forget the can opener—and don't forget the Bisquick® baking mix! That handy metal opener is top priority equipment. Your "open sesame" to a welcome feast of chili or baked beans after a long day on the trail. (To heat canned foods, be sure to remove labels and cut lids almost all the way around.) And with Bisquick baking mix in your knapsack, think!—flapjacks under the sky, maybe even made with wild blueberries. OR fluffy, bubbling dumplings in a stew. OR wrap-around dough for pigs in a blanket. For more tantalizing thoughts for cooking in the out-of-doors, read on.

BISCUITS IN A SKILLET

1/4 cup butter or margarine
Onion salt
Garlic salt
Paprika
2 cups Bisquick baking mix
1/2 cup cold water

Heat butter in 9- or 10-inch skillet until melted. Sprinkle with onion salt, garlic salt and paprika. Mix baking mix and cold water until soft dough forms; beat vigorously 30 strokes. Gently smooth dough into ball on floured cloth-covered board. Knead 5 times. Roll 1/2 inch thick. Cut with floured 2-inch cutter. Dip biscuits in skillet to coat with butter. Arrange in skillet; cover with heavy-duty aluminum foil, tucking ends underneath. Cook over grill until done, about 15 minutes. Invert to serve so crisp, browned side is up.

Serve 'em hot with Pocket Stew—the camp cook's delight because it's an outdoor meal in a dish complete with its foil server.

POCKET STEW

Make 4 hamburger patties from 1 pound ground beef. Place each patty on 12-inch square of double thickness heavy-duty aluminum foil. Top each with a slice of onion and slice of raw potato. Add two carrot strips. Sprinkle with 1 teaspoon salt and 1/8 teaspoon pepper. Seal foil securely. Place on hot coals, turning twice during cooking, until done, about 25 minutes. 4 servings.

Fisherman in the crowd? Turn a big day's catch into a fisherman's feast. Coat all sides of fresh fish with Bisquick baking mix. Dip in milk; roll again in baking mix. Cook in small amount of fat until brown.

Understanding Cholesterol

Q. A friend told me to stop worrying about cholesterol since my body manufactures it all the time. If this is true, why does it matter how much I eat?

A. We get cholesterol in many animal foods and, since our bodies can manufacture it, there is little danger of not having enough.

Generally, the body regulates cholesterol well. If we eat less, the body supplies the missing amounts. If we eat more, the body makes less. Extra cholesterol is destroyed and excreted.

But the bodies of many people cannot cope with a lot of cholesterol-rich foods, particularly if these are in an average American diet which is rich in saturated fat. (For this reason, doctors often suggest restricting fatty meats, butter, cheese and rich baked goods, and recommend using polyunsaturated fats such as Mazola corn oil and margarine.)

When the cholesterol-regulating mechanism is faulty, the level of cholesterol in the blood can go up. This often leads to deposits of cholesterol in the artery walls, and increases the risk of heart attack.

As a rule, reducing the intake of cholesterol tends to lower blood cholesterol levels. But each individual is different! A few people have a high blood cholesterol level even on a restricted diet. In others, the level is normal in spite of what they eat. Women of child-bearing age are likely to have lower cholesterol levels than do men.

But for most Americans, nutritionists and heart specialists suggest limiting cholesterol intake to no more than 300 mg. per day. Remember this: no food of vegetable origin contains cholesterol. It is not found in fruits or vegetables including potatoes, grains, cereals, nuts or peanut butter. Other low-cholesterol foods are margarines, salad and cooking oils, plain breads, gelatin, egg white, fruit ices and hard candy.

Some foods high in cholesterol are also high in saturated fat: cheese, meat and milk. Some high-cholesterol foods have very little fat — such as shrimp. Highest in cholesterol are the key organs of the animal. Liver, for instance, is much higher in cholesterol than steak. Here is a list to help guide your eating:

Over 200 mg. cholesterol: 3-1/2 oz. liver, sweetbreads or brains; 1 egg or 1 egg yolk.

50 to 100 mg. 3-1/2 oz. lean beef, pork, ham, lamb, veal, poultry, fish or most shellfish; 1 oz. shrimp; 1 piece custard pie, cakes or pastries rich in egg yolk.

10 to 50 mg. 2 tsp. butter, 1 tbsp. light cream, 1/2 cup vanilla ice cream, 1 cup ice milk or yogurt, 2 slices crisp bacon, 1 frankfurter, 3/4 cup cream soup, 1 serving plain cake or fruit pie, 2 cookies, 1 muffin.

Curits, Marinaro are cut victims

Linebacker Mike Curtis and running back Ed Marinaro were the best-known victims as National Football League teams cut their rosters to 46 players Tuesday.

Curtis was waived by the Seattle Seahawks and Marinaro, a former NCAA rushing champion, was cut by the New York Jets. For Curtis, a 34-year-old veteran of 13 pro seasons, it may be the end of the line. For Marinaro, it is the end of an unhappy experience.

"I can't help but feel a little bitter," Marinaro said after being cut by the Jets, with whom he signed as a free agent in 1976. "I left a championship team in Minnesota to play in New York and I played well when I got the chance. But, when they feel you're not helping, you're expendable. The past performances don't matter."

Marinaro's best NFL season was 1975 with the Vikings, when he caught 54 passes for 463 yards and rushed for 388. With the Jets, Marinaro played just six games before being sidelined with a foot injury. He rushed for 312 yards in 77 carries and caught 21 passes for 168 yards.

Curtis, a mainstay of the great Baltimore defense of the late 1960s and a former All-Pro, was obtained in the expansion draft by Seattle last year. He started at outside linebacker in every Seattle game last season.

As a middle linebacker for Baltimore, Curtis gained a reputation for aggressive play. He once used a forearm smash to deck a fan who ran onto the field during a Colts' game.

Also cut as NFL teams entered the final week of the preseason was quarterback Gary Marangi of Buffalo, who started the Bills' last seven games last season, all losses. Marangi had been traded to Green Bay last week but failed the Packers' physical and the deal was nullified.

Brock's three hits, two steals help Birds win

CHICAGO (AP) — Lou Brock considers himself a "professional technician" and doing his thing against the Chicago Cubs—the team which years ago dealt him away to the St. Louis Cardinals—doesn't give him any extra thrills.

"Let's put that to rest forever," said Brock in reference to the Cubs. Nevertheless, Brock helped do in his former club 3-1 Tuesday with three hits and two stolen bases while Ted Simmons drove in two runs with a homer and a single.

Brock last week cracked Ty Cobb's career record of 892 stolen bases and the two he nailed against the Cubs Tuesday extended his mark to 896, giving him 31 for the present season.

The 38-year-old Brock said, "It wouldn't be realistic" to think he might steal 1,000 bases, but he still has a goal in baseball and that is to reach 3,000 hits.

His two singles and a double gave him a career total of 2,810 hits and 109 for the present season. Brock wants 3,000 hits badly, but isn't sure he can do it by playing only one more full year. "If I close hot this year and get maybe 40 more hits, then I'd only need 150 next year," aid Brock.

"That might be possible. But if I need more than that, then I might have to play longer. But I'll only play as long as I can contribute to the club."

Pitcher Tom Underwood and Simmons also contributed to the St. Louis cause. Underwood, 8-10, hurled his first complete game of the season by setting the Cubs down on six hits.

Underwood and Simmons have varying feelings about playing in Wrigley Field. "I love it," said Simmons. "I hate it," said Underwood, who almost came to the Cubs before Philadelphia dealt him to St. Louis for outfielder Bake McBride.

"Yes, I know all about it, and I'm glad the deal wasn't made," said Underwood. "I like the Cubs and would fit into their plans, but I don't like pitching in this park. I'm lucky that the two times I've pitched hre, the wind has been blowing in."

Simmons likes playing in Wrigley field so much that if he had a steady diet of it he could wind up being the only major league catcher to win a batting title aside from Ernie Lombardi, who did it for Cincinnati in 1938 and the old Boston Braves in 1942.

"I'm a native of Michigan, and Chicago is the only place where we play that has Michigan summers," said Simmons. "There are some clubs I hit well against and the Cubs are one of them. Also, I just like hitting in this park."

Simmons raised his average to .332 to put him in third place in the National League batting race, four percentage points behind Rennie Stennett of Pittsburgh, who is out for the season, and 18 behind Dave Parker of Pittsburgh.

The Cardinals moved to Pittsburgh today for the start of a two-game series.

Jr. Babe Ruth awards made at banquet

Approximately 230 supporters of the Junior Babe Ruth program were on hand last night for the annual awards banquet. The dinner was held in the Senior High Cafetorium with Commissioner Jim Green and assistant Roger Sherman presiding.

The 14-15 year-old All-Stars were recognized for their second-place in the state championships. (The winner was Jefferson City, who advanced as far as the quarterfinals of the World Series.) The 13 year-olds were also singled out for their outstanding play in winning the regional crown.

Special citations were given to the sponsors, Glenda Wasson for her work in concessions, the scorekeepers, Missy Green and Larry Lasater, Eddy Wasson, groundskeeper; and Rita Lasater for her work in keeping the financial integrity of the league together. The staff of the Daily Standard was even recognized for its coverage of the long season.

Joe Uhls, long-time baseball coach of the Southeast Missouri Indians was on hand in the roll of a guest speaker.

Palsy slow pitch tourney is scheduled

CHAFFEE - The Chaffee Jaycees will sponsor their Second Annual Cerebral Palsy Softball Tournament beginning Sept. 17 at Harmon Field in Chaffee. All proceeds from the tournament and concessions will be given to the KFVS Cerebral Palsy Telethon. A goal of $1,000 is hoped to be raised.

Drawings for the slow pitch tournament will be held at 8:00 p.m. Sept. 14 at Big E Tavern in Chaffee. Interested teams should call Paul Fries at 887-6139 or Richard Hodge at 887-3177. Entry fee will be a $35 donation.

Route to Aquinas game announced

Sikeston High School officials said Tuesday that spectators from here wishing to attend the football game between the Bulldogs and St. Thomas Aquinas at Florissant can expect about a three hour drive Friday evening.

Athletic Director Steve Borgsmiller announced directions to the Aquinas playing field at Ferguson Junior High to assist fans who want to back the Bulldogs.

Motorists should take Interstate 55 North and exit at I-270, south of St. Louis. They should proceed west on I-270, which circles the city, and take the Florissant Road exit to the right. Proceed one block to January Avenue and take another right. Ferguson Junior High School will be on the right side of the highway, beside January Park, which is on the corner of Florissant Road and January Avenue.

Principal Robert Buchanan said that two student busses are already scheduled for the trip to St. Louis County, and added that numerous adults have inquired about directions to the game, giving hope of a good Sikeston rooting section.

Donipahn banking on 13 seniors for improvement

By DALE FORBIS
Daily Standard

DONIPHAN -- Doniphan coach Ed Rickus says you can't really call 1977 a rebuilding year for his Dons, even though his team returns only three starters from last season's 2-8 squad.

"We've got a good senior class of 13 players," points out Rickus, "But, nine of them didn't play last year."

"You can't really call this a rebuilding year because we will lose so many players before next year."

Converted fullback David Gettings may carry a big part of the Doniphan offensive success on his legs. The 220-pounder played tackle last year, but has the speed to run at fullback if, according to the coach, "he can hang onto the ball."

"If he (Gettings) doesn't fumble, he can help us running play. Otherwise, he should be a good blocker since he was a tackle."

Halfback Bruce Hunt and tackle Mark Rodgers are the other returning Dons. Brian Ball, a 160-pound back, started parttime as a junior. Rodgers, a 215 pounds, must bolster a green defense.

Doniphan starts against Caruthersville this Friday.

"I don't even have the faintest idea what he (CHS coach LLoyd Block) will have down there."

Considering the season, Rickus says, "If we could win against Caruthersville, we could be tough."

Ricky York, a 180-pound end-back, offers the team speed and a breakaway threat at all times. York has scooted through a 220-yard dash in a best time of 22.1 seconds. Leonard Hopkins is another senior who will be hindered by lack of experience, but offers a good deal of speed to the Dons in their quest to advance past last year's sixth-place finish.

"We've got some young boys, sophomores, who may move in a guard and tackle as the year goes on," Rickus points out. "Other than that, we'll double (go both ways) all the way down the lineup."

Junior quarterback Rusty Rawlings will lead the offense, operating out of a double-split or slot offensive set.

"We think he'll (Rawlings) develop into a good passer.

Evaluating the conference situation, Rickus thinks Portageville will have as good a shot at the title as Ilimo-Scott City, but the coach, who enters his second year at Doniphan, admits the Rams will be "right in there."

Losses won't keep JHS defense from being tough

By MIKE MARSH
Sportswriter

JACKSON – Under Coach Paul Webber, Jackson has been known for its wishbone offense and rugged defense. (They surrendered only 53 points in ten outings last year.) If you expect to see a change from the Indians, don't hold your breath.

"It's going to be difficult to replace some of the people we lost on defense," proclaimed a solemn Coach Webber. Losing All-Conference performers such as Jim Thompson, Rich Weith, (also All-District) and Kelly Green from your secondary along with All-State linebacker Mike Gohn would seem like a devasting blow. However, followers of the Indians know that someone well-trained and capable will probably be taking their place. Even the loss of Gohn may be softened by the expected performance of Mark Collier, a hard-hitting starter from the '76 squad.

Not all is lost for the Indians, who will have some excellent young players returning from last year's 6-4 season. Quarterback Sam Birk and tackle Bob Uren were both second team all-conference and will return to do battle in the Northern Division. Doug Goodson, Blaine Adams, and Curt Davidson are two-year lettermen who will also return to the offensive and defensive lines.

Along with Birk in the backfield, Jimmy Williams and Kevin Rampley will also have some play under their belt. Both were used last year in the wishbone and Rampley was in the top twenty rushers with 391 yards. (Along with his state championship in wrestling.)

The blending of experience with the tradition of Jackson make them a formidable opponent, as usual. Coach Webber's squad was idle last Friday and he still has some reservations about how his youngsters will perform "under battle conditions." To summarize his team, Webber stated that, "We don't have a super-star. We feel we have a sound team." And the offense? "Williams and Rampley are not blessed with outstanding speed, but will give us good balance. No one will be able to key on one individual and stop our attack."

In regards to the race for Northern supremacy, Webber feels it will be "very interesting. Poplar Bluff, Perryville, and Dexter are right up there. Of course Sikeston and Jackson will also be tough."

And in case anyone is feeling the least bit sorry for the loss of many quality players from last year's team. Webber said, "We believe we're going to be very competitive, especially if we can keep our people healthy. It's going to take a good team to beat us."

Hard work helps KC pinch swingers

A more disparate trio might be hard to find, but LaCock, Wathan and Zdeb are three unsung reasons why the Kansas City Royals have rushed to the head of the American League West class.

"Just a lot of hard work," says Charlie Lau, the Royals' hitting coach. "Most of these guys are fringe players with not all the ability in the world. But somewhere along the line they've realized the secret of making it in the big leagues."

LaCock, Wathan and Zdeb are the cream of a pinch hitting corps that may well be the most consistent in either league this season.

The Royals, whose pinch hitters checked in with an anemic .200 showing in 1976, are now racing along at a .304 pace. That's the second-best showing in the AL and their 30 runs batted in are tops.

"We've really got a lot of pride. We work pretty hard and everybody's got a job to do," said LaCock, who owns a .364 pinch-hitting mark with three RBIs.

Wathan is batting .375 in substitute plate appearances with five RBIs, while Zdeb stands at .357 and six. Zdeb, a rookie, also has three of the team's eight game-winning pinch hits, including a home run.

Herzog is quick to admit the Royals have a more versatile bench this season. LaCock, Joe Lahoud and Tom Poquette give Kansas City left-handed punch, while Cookie Rojas joins Wathan and Zdeb to provide balance from the right side.

"Pinch hitting is funny. Early this season we just didn't get the job done and everyone said we had no bench," Herzog commented. "You just gotta get the guys up there you think hit the pitcher the best."

Herzog believes that giving his backup players some occasional starts makes them more effective when a pinch hitter is needed.

"It seemed like when I was playing and I got up two or three times a week, I could always pinch hit," he said. "But I only got in five games my last year in Detroit and I couldn't do thing."

Wathan, a second-year catcher, says a certain temperament is needed to be a successful pinch hitter. A player has to be aggressive at the plate, yet patient in waiting for his turn.

"I feel pretty relaxed up there, and just swing the best I can," Wathan shrugged.

"There's no use crying about it. I look at it this way. Not much is expected of me. If I get a hit, it's a big bonus. If not, that's it. There's no use putting more pressure on yourself."

All three of the Royals' bench stars hope their exploits lead to more steady jobs — but nobody is complaining right now.

"I like to do anything in the big leagues," said Zdeb, a 24-year-old outfielder. "It's good experience to come right in to a contending club and a pennant race."

USC more prepare, says Coach Robinson

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The experiments, the inexperience and the jitters are behind Coach John Robinson and his Southern California football team, he says.

And he hopes that means his second season debut won't be a repeat of last year's — a 46-25 beating by Missouri.

The Trojans travel to Columbia, Mo., Saturday and Robinson told reporters at his weekly breakfast meeting Tuesday that he's ready.

"I hope I'm a better coach this year," he said. "I assume that. Our staff has been together for a year now. We have the feel of working together better. We were experimenting a lot last year. But also we were scared to death, being new, so you work like hell to make sure everything's right.

"A year ago, we were playing with a new passing attack system that developed dramatically during the year. We are further along now with the quarterbacks and receivers because they have been here a year now."

But while a victory Saturday would be nice, a look at last year's records shows that the first game isn't everything. USC lost no more games after Missouri, winning the Pacific-8 title, the Rose Bowl and a No. 2 national ranking. The Tigers were 6-5.

"It's important we don't focus on one game," Robinson cautioned. "It will hurt us some for this game. We have not been a great team to start a season. I read where we have lost three of the last six openers."

Looking at his opponents, Robinson said Missouri has two good receivers in Joe Stewart and Leo Lewis and is one of the best teams at running the option.

Borg withdraws from U.S. Open with injury

FOREST HILLS, N.Y. (AP) — A computer, in its infinite wisdom, spewed out the seedings at the U.S. Open Tennis Tournament, predicting that top-seeded Bjorn Borg of Sweden would meet No. 2 Jimmy Connors in the finals, a rematch of their grand, five-set thriller at Wimbledon earlier this summer.

The computer didn't know about the pectoral muscle. It didn't know about pain. So it certainly didn't expect Borg, the Wimbledon champ, to be sitting on his stool when the bell rang for the second game of his third set with Dick Stockton of Dallas on Tuesday.

And the computer never will understand that only the severest kind of pain to his injured muscle could make the 21-year-old Swede default his fourth-round match, robbing him of the chance to win the only major tournament that has eluded him.

"I'm very disappointed. I wanted to do really well this year, especially after coming so close (second) last year," said Borg after he defaulted his match to Stockton 3-6, 6-4, 1-0. "This was the worst. It was much too painful to serve, and what can you do if you can't serve?"

Connors downplayed Borg's default. "He's out of the tournament? Oh," he deadpanned. Then he joked. "I got one round farther than he did, maybe I'm No. 1 on the computer now."

He was certainly No. 1 on the court Tuesday night when he devastated Roscoe Tanner, the No. 11 seed from Lookout Mountain, Tenn., 6-0, 6-2 in a match that took 55 minutes only because it takes time to change courts every odd game.

Connors and Stockton joined Manuel Orantes and Brian Gottfried Tuesday in advancing to the quarter-finals of the Open. Orantes, of Spain, the No. 5 seed who is playing marvelous tennis, easily handled 18-year-old John McEnroe of Douglaston, N.Y. 6-2, 6-3.

Royals nip Seattle 10-0

SEATTLE (AP) — Al Cowens has continued to take advantage of expansion club pitching, collecting five hits in one game for the second time this year as the Kansas City Royals trounced the Seattle Mariners 10-0.

"This is the biggest night in my career," he said after socking two homers, a double and two singles Tuesday night. "For one thing, this is the first time I've hit two homers in one game."

Cowens had his first five-hit game on June 1 in Toronto.

His two home runs Tuesday night boosted his total to 21 for the season. He drove in four runs and scored four times.

Meanwhile, three Kansas City pitchers — Paul Splittorf, 13-6, Randy McGilberry in his major league debut and Mark Littell — limited the Mariners to four hits, two by Juan Bernhardt.

Kansas City Manager Whitey Herzog said he replaced Splittorf after six innings because his "back's a little tender. There's no sense forcing it."

Cowens first homer well into the leftfield seats followed a run-scoring double by George Brett in the first inning. His second blast, after Brett was hit by a pitch in the third, chased Seattle starter Rick Honeycutt, 0-1.

"It was a fastball away and I just stayed with it," Cowens said. "That was my first one to right field this year.

"I don't pay any attention to the distance of the homers. I just get a thrill out of hitting them."

Cowens tallied again in the seventh when Amos Otis socked his 15th homer of the season off Seattle's Bob Galasso.

Kansas City picked up two more runs in the sixth on Fred Patek's fourth homer of the year and a wild pitch by Galasso, who had replaced Segui with runners on second and third.

Seattle's director of player operations, Lou Gorman, said the Royals are going to be the American League champs.

"They can beat the Yankees or Boston."

Kansas City has won seven straight and 18 of its past 21 games.

"All we have to do is continue to win," Cowens said.

Gorman also said the Royals "might be a better team next year" with the addition of outfielder Clint Hurdle, one of the minor leagues' best players.

Johnny Duncan to appear at Bootheel Jamboree

BERNIE — Johnny Duncan a well known country and western recording star is scheduled to be the featured entertainer at the Bootheel Jamboree, here, Sept. 10. He is scheduled to give two shows, beginning at 6:30 p.m.

After nearly ten years as a Columbia recording artist, things were going just so-so for Johnny Duncan. There had been a couple of his records that were almost hits. He had had a few top-twenties, and a couple that reached the top-ten, but there was nothing really earth-shattering.

Then, in 1976, Johnny finally stumbled upon the right combination: a producer named Billy Sherrill, a girl singer named Janie Fricke, a song written by Kris Kristofferson called "Stranger," and a sizable quantity of Schlitz dark beer.

"Stranger" was the number one record in the nation for weeks during the Spring and Summer of 1976. Again, using the Billy Sherrill-Janie Fricke-Schlitz beer formula, Johnny went back into the studio in a relaxed frame of mind, and recorded "Thinkin' Of A Rendezvous," which also went to the number one. The same magic worked a third time with "it Couldn't Have Been Any Better," which also hit the number one spot.

In less than a year's time, Johnny Duncan has emerged after more than a decade of obscurity, to become one of the hottest commodities on the country music scene. "The main thing is that we found that groove, that tempo, that feel," Johnny explains. "You've got to find your groove and stay in it."

Johnny Duncan, who stands 6'4", and weighs in at 210 pounds, has often been noted for his "John Wayne physique," and his rugged looks. His eyes are deep-set and his slow drawl is punctuated with deep-throated chuckles. One female journalist wrote of Johnny: "He is of the stuff they write novels about. A tall, ruggedly handsome man, he likes his liquor, his women, and his songs." Underneath this rough-cut exterior, though, there's more. Johnny has a fascination with astrology ("My astrological number is six, and Friday is my lucky day."), and an underlying personal sensitivity. "When I go into a room," Johnny explains, "and I sense something is wrong, I think I'm to blame. I want to find out if I'm to blame."

38-year-old Johnny Duncan

grew up in Dublin, Texas. His mother taught him to play guitar by the time he was twelve. As a child, his idol was Chet Atkins, and years later, Johnny had a boyhood-dream-come-true when Chet recorded a song Johnny had written called "Summer Sunday."

There was a lot of music around when Johnny was growing up. Two of his childhood pickin' partners were his cousins, Jimmy and Danny Seals. Jimmy is now the Seals, of Seals and Croft; and Danny is now Dan England, of England Dan and John Ford Coley. "We used to have these country dances," Johnny recalls with a gleam in his eye. "They'd ice a No. 3 washtub full of Pearl beer, and they'd honk all night, my mother playing guitar, and my Uncle Ben Moroney on the fiddle."

In 1959, after spending some time at Texas Christian University where he studied English and Speech, Johnny moved to Clovis, New Mexico to work with Norman Petty, the man who discovered Buddy Holly and the Crickets, and Jimmy Gilmer and the Fireballs. Petty recorded Duncan in London and New York with a full contingent of harps and strings, but things just didn't go.

"I was recorded pop, which I'm not," Johnny declares. "My voice is smooth, but I'm country at heart."

After working as a DJ in the Southwest for several years, Johnny moved to Nashville in the early sixties. For two years he supported his wife and daughters by working as a bricklayer, and later as a DJ. Finally, one morning in 1966, Columbia's legendary Don Law spotted Johnny singing on Ralph Emery's early morning WSM television show and immediately offered him a recording contract. "It was the biggest day of my life," Johnny recalls.

With Columbia, Johnny's career began to pick up somewhat. He had a half-dozen or so chart records, beginning with "Hard Luck Joe," right up through "Jo And The Cowboy," and "Sweet Country Woman," along with several albums. In the meantime, Charlie Pride recorded a dozen or so of Johnny's songs, and from 1969 until 1972, Johnny opened on Charlie Pride's road shows. Afterwards, Johnny's recording career hit a slump. Although Columbia Records continued to believe in him, his records stopped hitting, and he spent two years singing in a dinner lounge in Bowling Green, Kentucky, 80 miles from Nashville. "We just couldn't get the answer," Johnny recalls, "we just didn't have the hit song ... The DJ's had known me since the late sixties, but we never seemed to put it together."

Finally one day, while traveling between Texas and Nashville, Johnny heard "the" hit song on his car radio. "I heard this song by Billy Swan, which was written by Kristofferson and I didn't know at the time that it was just an album cut. When I got back to Nashville, I was talking to Bob Beckham at Combine Music (Swan's and Kristofferson's publisher), and I said it sounded like Billy Swan had another smash with that song called 'Stranger.'

He told me it was just an album cut." Not long afterward, Johnny walked into Billy Sherrill's office and mentioned "Stranger." Billy nearly jumped out of his chair. "Stranger!?" he asked incredulously, "Why just now, somebody in New York called to tell me about that song!" In five minutes time, Sherrill was on the phone, calling musicians and organizing Duncan's next session.

The day of the session, Johnny showed up at the studio time, but Billy Sherrill told him to relax for a couple hours, and come back. So Johnny went to a local bar with a Schlitz dark beer tap, and followed his instructions to a tee. "I got more than relaxed," he recalls ... "I didn't intend to get wiped out (for the session)." Asked how the beer affected his singing, Johnny replied sheepishly, "All I have to say is it was the first time I ever recorded a number one record." Since then, when he is about to record, Johnny has been known to carry a six-pack of beer into the studio with him, just for good luck.

Though Johnny Duncan is, and always will be a Texan, he emphasizes that he wants no part of the outlaw movement. "Hell no, "I'm not an outlaw," he says. "These people are my friends, and I personally go out and buy their records, but that's just not me. I'm pretty conservative ... I'm no different now than when I was workin' out in the 110-degree sun, wearin' boots, blue jeans, and a work shirt."

Today Johnny resides outside Tolar, Texas in Brazos River cattle country. He lives with his three teen-aged daughters, Angie, Lezlie, and Lori. (His marriage of 16 years ended in divorce several years ago.) His house is situated on 57 acres of land. The farm's residents include a quarter-horse mare and three dogs. Although Duncan misses the creative cross-fire of the music scene in Nashville, and would like to move back there, he refuses to entertain the thought seriously. "The girls love the schools here," he says in total explanation, "so we'll stay based in Texas."

Johnny Duncan has lived the life he sings about; he's known the women. He's been through the pain of divorce, the loneliness of one-night stands, and the bitter-sweetness of romance both casual and serious. Johnny insists he won't sing a song if it doesn't "fit my lifestyle or reflect my personal opinions." He feels most at home with songs that are "not negative tear-jerkers, crying in your beer things ... basically positive things, but not your 'amazing love, get-up-in-the-morning, and leave-a-rose-on-the-pillow song either ... somewhere in-between." Johnny's deep, richly textured voice lends itself well to the themes he sings about. He's been compared to Ray Price and the late Jim Reeves, two men whom Johnny lists as his biggest influences.

Johnny Duncan's story reflects the magic of the music business. After over a decade of near-misses and obscurity, he has found the winning combination that has turned him into a thumbs-up, bona-fide country music star, who is now in demand across the country. The winning combination in this case is the beer (Schlitz), the producer (Billy Sherrill), the female accompanist (Janie Fricke), and most of all, the artist ... Johnny Duncan.

NEWS Of Medicine

SCANNING YOUR HEART

This year more than one million Americans will suffer a heart attack, reports the American Heart Association, including many in the prime years of life.

Fortunately, because of recent advances, a large and increasing number of patients now survive a first and even a second heart attack—and a majority of these patients return to productive lives.

One significant advance in diagnosing possible heart trouble is a computerized, scanning gamma camera. Detailed clinical information which before could be obtained only with considerable patient time, trauma and expense may now be derived routinely, painlessly and at far less cost—on an out-patient basis.

Called the Baird-Atomic System Seventy-Seven, the camera can perform many studies, particularly of the heart, which were formerly impossible. It was developed by scientists at Baird-Atomic, a high-technology company that has made a major contribution in the field of medicine as well as other areas for more than 40 years.

The new camera has become an indispensable diagnostic tool in clinics throughout the world and has also become a means of encouraging cardiac care on a preventive medicine basis, in which an annual checkup of the heart will soon become as routine as a chest X-ray every year.

Haute couture comes cheaper in Budapest

By ERIC WAHA

BUDAPEST (AP) — In Communist Hungary, there is a dictatorship of fashion.

"We follow the Paris style absolutely," said Lilly Schleifer, one of the three women who have run Budapest's Salon Clara since the death of the legendary Clara Rothschild several months ago.

Clara Rothschild was the "big woman" of Hungarian fashion although she was tiny and frail.

In 1950, shortly after Communism came to power in Hungary, she gave her business away to the state with the understanding she could continue to run it.

The Salon Clara is still state-owned, but Mrs. Schleifer made clear that the trio running it would have little if any interference from the Communist government.

The other two women are Susan Toeroek and Magdalena Russai.

They said the Budapest women buying dresses at the Salon Clara had no opportunity to tone down the new Paris style, if they should think perhaps it was too extravagant or even daring.

"There is no compromise in haute couture," said Mrs. Schleifer, who said business was very good.

Customers include women from the United States, Britain, Canada, West Germany, Switzerland, Italy, Holland and Austria, among others.

Why should anyone from the West travel to Budapest to buy a haute couture dress there instead of at Paris or the top Italian fashion centers?

Because of the salon's lower prices and first-class workmanship, Mrs. Schleifer explained.

Though she refused to disclose any prices, she said, "For the money a woman spends in Paris for one dress, she can get two-and-a-half here."

The salon employs "far more than a hundred first-class dressmakers. Our embroidery department is one of the finest in the world," Mrs. Schleifer declares.

Vaci Utca, where the salon is located, is Budapest's main business street. It is in the center of the city, not far from the big hotels.

Amendments may ban mousetraps in Ohio

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — When Ohioans go to the polls in November it appears they'll be voting on an amendment to the state constitution that would ban mousetraps.

The Ohio Committee for Humane Trapping, Inc., has tentatively qualified its proposal to ban leg-hold traps in the state as one of the amendment issues for the general election ballot.

The committee, headed by Sandy Rowland of Bowling Green, claims the traps are inhumane and cause "continuing, prolonged suffering" in both wild and domestic animals.

Mrs. Rowland said she was optimistic that the voters would approve the amendment in light of a poll which "indicates 74.9 per cent of the Ohio electorate favors" such a ban.

While there may be many Ohioans who want to outlaw the traps, some 50,000 state residents are licensed to trap and and their income from raw furs alone totals $5 million a year, according to the Department of Natural Resources.

"Economy is not my business, managing resources is," said wildlife division chief Dale Haney. "But there is a whole other picture involved" in such a ban.

The wildlife division feels that trapping "is essential to wildlife management," Haney explained. "And we view (the proposed ban) as a threat to our ability to manage the (wildlife) resource."

Mrs. Rowland calls leg hold traps "totally indiscriminate ... barbaric ... and unnecessary. There are other trapping devices that could and should be used."

The trouble is, it looks as if the amendment also would wind up outlawing the catching of birds for banding purposes and the use of the common, everyday home mousetrap. The language of the amendment proposal says it would be against the law to use any kind of trap that would cause "continuing, prolonged suffering."

Opponents point out that anytime you keep an animal against its will — in any kind of trap, including the sort Mrs. Rowland says should be used — it suffers for a continuing period of time — even if it's just 20 minutes.

The department will be putting up a fight. So will Ohioans for Wildlife Conservation, the Wildlife Legislative Fund and other organized sportsman's groups and interests.

The newest group, Ohioans for Wildlife Conservation, has some high powered backers — former U.S. Atty. Gen. William Saxbe, home in Mechanicsburg after a stint as U.S. Ambassador to India; Dan Galbreath, financier and sportsman, and pro golfers Tom Weiskopf and Ed Sneed..

Gov. James A. Rhodes hasn't taken a public stand on the issue. But as governor, he runs the natural resources department and the department is totally against the proposal. This indicates that the department has his tacit approval to oppose the ban.

Whether you do sanding with a power tool or by hand, the choice of the proper sandpaper has an effect on the quality of the result.

To make the right selection, it is necessary to know something about the kinds of material available and what their purposes are. Keep the following list handy so that when you have a finishing job to do, you can refer to it as a guide for choosing the best abrasive for the specific project.

Closed-coat abrasive — The particles are close together. This is the type used in most finishing tasks.

Open-coated abrasive — The particles are spaced farther apart so that the sandpaper won't be clogging continuously. Generally used on rough work that tends to cause clogging.

Extra coarse — Mostly for removing paint and other old finishes.

Coarse — For smoothing out rough stock that is badly in need of sanding.

Medium — For smoothing out surfaces that have small scratches and slight imperfections.

Very fine — When the finishing instructions call for a light sanding between coats, this is the grade to use.

(Grading systems using numbers are still being used, but there is more than one such system, so it is better to buy according to the above list.)

Flint — The cheapest. Less efficient than other kinds, but good for rough hand sanding, since it can be thrown away when it clogs.

Garnet — Also inexpensive. Better than flint and especially effective on hardwood.

Silicon carbide — Another man-made product. Similar characteristics to aluminum oxide. Excellent for sanding glass and other hard materials.

Emery — For use on metal, although the previously mentioned two products are beginning to take over some of its functions.

Wet-or-dry — Has a waterproof backing so that it can be used when wet, considered an advantage for fine sanding by many professional finishers.

Sanding block — An object around which the sandpaper is wrapped when sanding by hand. Can be rubber, wood, metal or any other material. The more resilient the block, the more sensitive it is to precision sanding; a rubber block, for instance, is good for rounding the ends of wood.

(Do-it-yourselfers will find much valuable information in Andy Lang's handbook, "Practical Home Repairs," available by sending $1.50 to this newspaper at Box 5, Teaneck, NJ 07666.)

Stamps In The News

Collectors of the subject "cars on stamps" are excited about the new issue from Togo which hails the 100th anniversary of the birth of Louis Renault, famous automobile designer and manufacturer. The set of six stamps and a souvenir sheet features illustrations of classic old autos.

The 35 fr shows the Benz of Germany, 1894, with its open style design. The 50 fr depicts the De Dion Bouton of France, 1893, also featuring an open carriage design. The 60 fr pictures the Cannstatt-Daimler of Germany, 1899, predecessor of the Mercedes. The 70 fr has the Sunbeam of England,1904 model. The 100 fr displays the Renault of France, 1908 model. The highest value is the 200 fr which illustrates the Silver Ghost by Rolls Royce of England, produced in 1909. The souvenir sheet repeats the 100 fr and 200-fr designs and also shows Thomas Rickett's 1858 steam-driven auto.

Another new set of stamps highlighting the endangered animal species of its country has been issued by the West African Republic of Togo. These stamps bring special attention to major groups of African mammals and reptiles faced with extinction.

Featured on the stamps are the African slender-snouted crocodile, Nile crocodile, olive colobus, chimpanzee, leopard and West African manatee.

Amid all the hubbub and hoopla engendered by the issuance of stamps honoring the Silver Jubilee of Queen Elizabeth II's accession to the throne, is the last hurrah — the long-awaited set of four stamps from Britain's own post office. The release of the stamps coincided with the Jubilee Tour by the Queen started last May in Scotland. The tour ends in Londonderry on Aug. 11.

The new stamps are in values of 8.5 pence, 10 p, 11 p, and 13 p. Reminiscent of the 1935 Jubilee issue, the design is built around a portrait of the Queen. It is framed with the decorated initials "ER", the words "Silver Jubilee" and the dates "1952-1977." Each stamp differs only in the color and the detailed decoration of the initials.

The only other Royal Silver Jubilee stamp issue was in 1935 to celebrate 25 years of the reign of King George V.

Collector Always Has Time To Enjoy Clocks

"I can't think of any other field that has inspired more ingenuity, innovation and inventive genius than the making of timepieces," Martines says.

Beginning with a small boy's typical interest — and disaster — Martines came to be not only a clock fancier but a repairman, collector and dealer in antique pieces. He also distributes a newsletter to 500 other collectors.

"I like to think that in most cases I don't sell a clock, I 'place' it," Martines says. "A lot of people these days can afford fine old clocks but really don't appreciate them. I like to know that the people I do business with thoroughly appreciate and will give a good home to the clocks they purchase."

He was about 12 when curiosity about the family alarm clock caused it to explode in his hands. "I didn't know you had to take the tension off the spring before you disassembled the movement," he recalls.

He was just looking and admiring when he began exploring antique shops, because he had no money. "But as time went on, purely by long observation, I began to recognize the good from the bad, the jewels from the junk. You automatically begin to note detail in glass, furniture and clocks and differentiate the unusual from the usual."

His wife, Peggy, was responsible for his acquiring one of his noteworthy items, an elegant grandfather's clock priced at $700. He was a Cleveland school teacher at the time and put off looking at it in the shop because he knew he might fall in love with it despite the lack of money.

At last he put down $50 without the foggiest notion where he would get the rest but knowing that he would somehow. Ultimately he sold one of their two cars to pay for it.

"That's pretty much the philosophy you have to follow to acquire things you simply can't live without," he says.

"I probably know more about clockmakers of the last century than anybody in the country, because I made it my business," he says. "I can look at a clock and tell you what parts have been replaced and, in most cases, who made the replacement parts.

"A fine old clock is really the combining of many skills," Martines says. "The maker of the movement was rarely involved in any phase but that. Somebody else painted and decorated the face or dial, other artists did the reverse-painting-on-glass on the lower part of the doors. Still other specialists produced the wooden cases."

He left teaching to become a securities salesman but the firm folded and friends suggested he turn his clock hobby into a business.

"Every minute of my clock work is enjoyable," Martines says. "You meet no shallow people in this business.

"And the best part is that it's all here at home."

Recently, remains were found of a dinosaur, the Stokesosauraus clevelandi which is the first new genus and species discovered in 75 years The World Almanac notes. The creature, fully grown at 13 feet in length and five feet in height, roamed the Utah region some 140 million years ago.

Deaths

J.C. Fowler

CHARLESTON – Judge Cletis Fowler, 68, a resident of the Host House, died at 3:30 p.m. Friday in Chaffee General Hospital, where he had been a patient since Aug. 31.

Born Feb. 10, 1911 in Bollinger County to the late Thomas Jefferson and Elsie Melissa Baker Fowler, he worked as a service station attendant most of his life until retiring in 1969.

He had lived at the Host House since 1971, following the loss of both legs in a tree trimming accident.

Survivors include: His widow, Veda Fowler of Alton, Ill.; three sons, Cletus, Cleo and Doke Fowler of Wood River, Ill.; three daughters, Margie, Shirley and Linda, whose last names and addresses are unavailable; one brother, T. J. Fowler of Godfrey, Ill.; three sisters, Mrs. Opal Buttry of East Alton, Ill., Mrs. Lola Pate of Advance and Mrs. Othella Tanner of Puxico; and several grandchildren.

Friends may call at Amick-Burnett Funeral Chapel in Chaffee, where services are scheduled at 2 p.m. Thursday with the Rev. Jimmie Brewer, pastor of the Assembly of God Church at Advance, officiating.

Ruby Blankinship

CANALOU – Pallbearers at services conducted today for Ruby Blankinship, 67, who died Sunday, were Frank Hays, Odell Bishop, Shot Fraley, Earl Jones, Don Slaton and John Summers.

Liddy released from prison

DANBURY, Conn. (AP) — Watergate burglar G. Gordon Liddy, who served more time than anyone convicted in the case, was released from prison today on parole after 58½ months confinement.

Liddy, who served extra time because he refused to cooperate with Watergate prosecutors, walked to freedom from the medium-security Federal Correctional Institution at Danbury at 9:38 a.m., accompanied by his wife, Frances.

He faces an uncertain future with debts of more than $290,000.

Liddy took with him several cartons of belongings and two attache cases which were loaded into the brown Ford Pinto subcompact car for the drive to the Liddys' Oxon Hill, Md., home and a reunion with the couple's five teen-age children.

He maintained his ramrod posture and impervious stare as 50 reporters and photographers pushed in on him, asking whether he would now break his silence on Watergate "for a price."

Liddy stared straight ahead, grim-faced.

Asked where he was going, he replied: "East of the sun and west of the moon."

At another point, asked how he felt, he responded in German.

Earlier, Mrs. Liddy had said, "We're just looking forward to having him home."

Mrs. Liddy has maintained the household near Washington on her salary as an elementary schoolteacher.

"He's in good spirits; very strong, just the same as always," said Mrs. Liddy.

The one-time counsel to former President Richard Nixon's re-election committee has missed a lot during his prison term. His sentence of six years and eight months to 20 years was lengthened by an additional 18 months for his refusal to testify under immunity to a federal grand jury about Watergate. But last April, President Carter ordered the sentence shortened to a maximum of eight years, making Liddy eligible for parole.

He has turned 46. His oldest daughter, Sandy, was 13 years old when the aborted burglary at the Democratic National Committee headquarters in Washington took place in 1972. She is now 18, a student at the University of Maryland.

His attorney, Peter Maroulis, said Liddy looked forward to getting home and spending time with his family.

Reporters got a glimpse of Liddy on Tuesday when he was driven in shackles from Danbury by federal marshals to Williamsport, Pa., where he swore at a pre-release pauper's hearing that he was broke and unable to pay immediately a $40,000 fine that was part of his original sentence.

He appeared thinner than when he entered prison on Jan. 30, 1973. A beard he had grown in prison had been shaved, but he still had his moustache. His black hair was combed straight back.

"No comment," he said to a reporter who asked what his plans were.

Council to set vote for chief

CARUTHERSVILLE – The date for a special election to fill the vacancy left by the resignation last week of Police Chief Jesse Johnson, is to be set during the city council meeting Thursday, according to a spokesman for Mayor B.G. Rogers.

The chief resigned Wednesday because of "too much harassment from the City Council and the newspaper here in town."

Rogers said six men have already begun circulating petitions for the special election, and that possible 8 to 10 candidates will be in the race before the filing deadline.

The mayor called Johnson "a good man. He's honest in every respect and a man of integrity. But he's had health problems that have given him a little trouble, and then we got into it with a little rash of burglaries and stuff like that. And the police committee was giving him some trouble about some of his men.

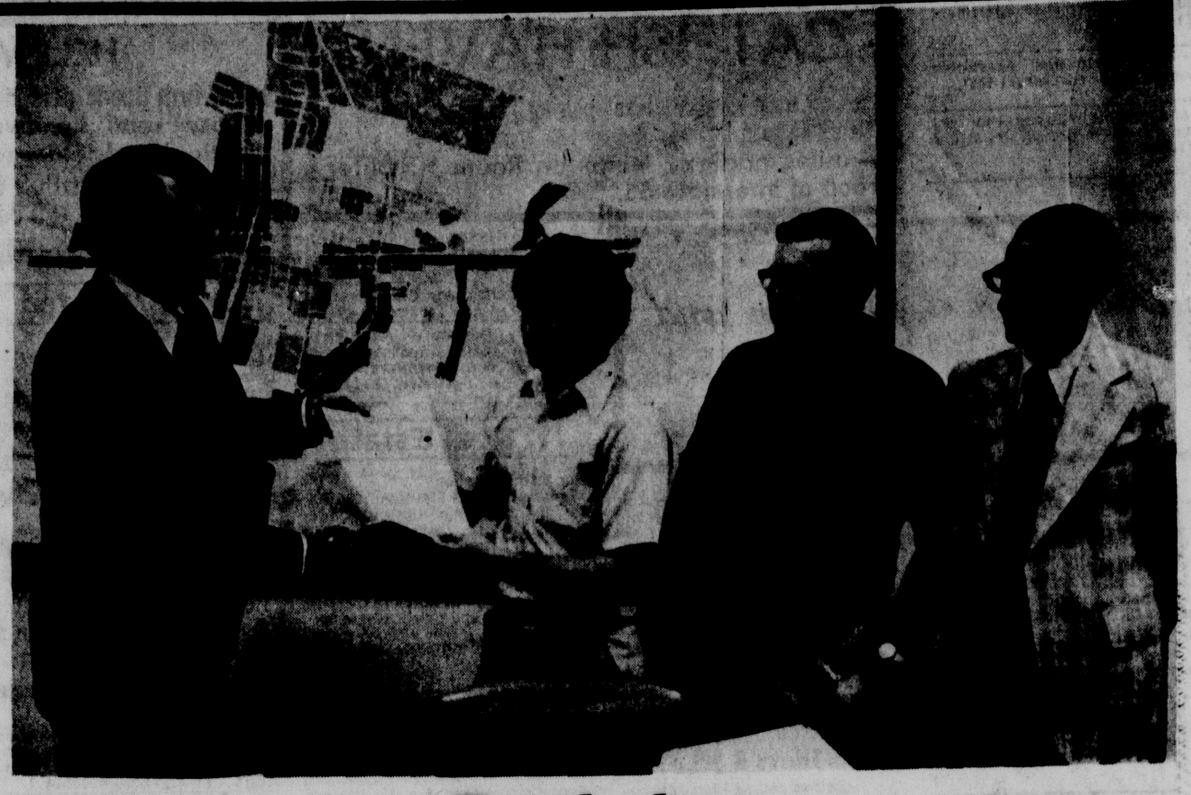
Rogers denied a statement by Ralph Clayton, general manager of The Pemiscot Journal and Democrat-Argus, that Johnson's resignation came in the wake of two closed council meetings last week.

Rogers also said the wave of burglaries that have plagued Caruthersville since the beginning of the year "have absolutely cooled off. After me telling the people to get their shotguns ready, it took hold. I'm still telling 'em to keep their shotguns ready, and I don't back up from what I tell you one inch."

Meanwhile, a source within the city government confirmed Thursday that six more burglaries have occurred in Caruthersville within the last week. The loot from the burglaries ranged from $100 in change to four Cadillac hubcaps to bags of potato chips. No arrests have been made.

The Golden Tree Snake can spring as high as four feet between tree branches and can glide through the air from bough to bough.

Motor vehicle accidents are the number one cause of death among Americans aged 15 to 24. Murder is the number two cause of death and suicide ranks third.



For the best

And most important, that the location of the school was set in published notices and board of education minutes. Any attempt now to change the location would invalidate the bond issue.

Supt. Sam Harbin said the bond issue is being presented to the public with about $90,000 going to the street and the utility lines. Any changes in the location would change the cost, he said.

Harbin said the Matthews family never said the road had to be called Salcedo Road.

The city kept the name and worked out an agreement to move the road on the west slode of North Main Street north by about 60 feet so the intersection can be signalized at a later date.

Council members assured the Fuchs family that they would not approve future extensions of the road withouty considering the problem of access to the Fuchs propertyy.

But they also said they thought the property will be well served, with the road a block north of the property line. The Fuchs'es would only need to buy right-of-way for a block of street to Salcedo Road.

The council authorized issuing the remaining $100,000 in water treatment bonds.

The council approved the Gloth Subdivision, an 11 lot development on Ables Road between Crowe Place and Illinois Ave.

A budget adjustment was made reflecting the continuation of the Public Service Employment Act from Oct. 1 through Sept. 30, 1978. The city employs 10 people under the project. Funding for the program had been set to expire this month, but was extended another year by Congress.

satisfactory correspondent balances in determining whether to make the loans and in calculating the profitability of loans after they were made."

"In addition, there is some evidence tending to support the view that, but for the correspondent accounts, the loans would not have been made."

But Heimann said "we do not believe that the prosecution of any individuals warranted."

Heimann said that the business from Lance's bank may have been to the detriment of two other banks. He suggested that the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, which has jurisdiction over the other banks may want to investigate further. The other banks were the Northwest Georgia Bank in Ringgold and the Cohutta Banking Co. of Chatsworth, Ga.

Waterbed for needy baby gets attention

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Normal production halted at a Maryland waterbed factory last week as the plant filled a special order for a suffering Cape Girardeau, Mo., baby.

The baby, Drew Templeton, was born Aug. 22 with a skin condition known as icthyosis.

"It's a very dry skin disorder," a spokesman for Children's Hospital in St. Louis said. "After birth, the baby was brought to us and the condition was so bad that when nurses touched, cuddled or tried to treat the baby, it cried in pain."

Mrs. Mary Hakan, a hospital physical therapist, felt a waterbed might help and called a local waterbed retailer. The retailer called Classic Products of Beltsville, Md., and explained the hospital's need for a 24 inch by 13 inch waterbed.

"We attempt to stock these small waterbeds because we have been getting calls from children's hospitals, but when the call from St. Louis came, we didn't have any in stock," said Mrs. Carole Lann, Midwest regional manager for Classic Products.

Gun control poll

One of the major issues of the Carter administration is the quest for stricter gun control in the President's forthcoming crime control package. Reliable sources say that the 95th Congess and the Carter administration will be pushing for the control this year.

The questions provided below are for you to voice your own opinion on the gun control issue. Please answer each one and mail your response to the Daily Standard, 305 S. New Madrid, Sikeston, MO., 63801.

Responses will be tabulated and results of the poll will be published in the Daily Standard at a later date.

1. Should private ownership of Handguns be banned by federal law?
2. Should the sale of handguns be limited to two per person per year?
3. Should the sale of sporting guns be subject to stringent federal regulations?
4. Should gun owners be required to register their guns?
5. If guns are registered should the names and addresses of the registrants be made available to government agencies?
6. Do you belive the U.S. Constitution guarantees citizen ownership of handguns for personal protection?

CAMERA Angles

By IRVING DESFOR
AP Newsfeatures

The "1977 Kodak International Newspaper Snapshot Awards" (KINSA). This annual, summer-long photo contest is sponsored this year by 124 participating newspapers in the United States, Canada and Mexico. Amateur photographers may enter either black-and-white or color photographs through a newspaper. As in previous years, there's a $55,000 jackpot to be distributed among about 240 winners. Two grand prize winners — for the best color and the best black-and-white photo — each get an expense-paid trip around the world for two for one month or $5,000. Eight runners-up get other travel trips; ten Honor Awards receive $500 each; and more than 200 are selected for Special Merit prizes of $100 each. For further information, write: KINSA Awards, Contest Activities, Eastman Kodak, Rochester, N.Y. 14650.

"Images of Time: Past, Present and Future," a photo contest sponsored by Time magazine for U.S. amateur photographers. Only previously unpublished pictures in color or black-and-white are eligible. They compete for a Grand Prize of $1,000; a 2nd Prize of $500; and three 3rd Prizes of $250. The deadline is Sept. 1, 1977, and winning photos will be published in a special photography issue of Time on Nov. 28. We find one of its rules objectionable: "All pictures submitted will become the property of Time, Inc. They will not be returned to entrants." Normally, only winning pictures become the sponsor's property and others are returned provided a stamped, self-addressed envelope is included. If you shoot duplicate transparencies, you can avoid a total loss by entering this contest. For all the rules and special entry forms, write: Images of Time Photo Contest, Time & Life Building, Rockefeller Center, New York, N.Y. 10020.

"Creative Front Lens Accessory Photography Contest," sponsored jointly by Spiratone Inc. and Hall of Science of the City of New York. It's open to all photographers with entries in color or black-and-white and offers prizes valued at over $4,000 in merchandise. To qualify, pictures must be taken with some type of front lens attachment such as: prisms, diffusers, split-field lenses, cross screens, fisheye attachments, special effect filters or any homemade device. The deadline is Sept. 30, 1977, and prizewinners will be exhibited at the Hall of Science, Flushing Meadows, N.Y. Rules and special entry forms can be obtained by sending a stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Spiratone Photo Contest, P.O. Box 54103, Flushing, N.Y. 11354.

"1977 Scout Scholarship Awards," sponsored by Eastman Kodak. Boy Scouts from age 11 to 15 who have earned their photography merit badge are eligible. There are two categories: color and black-and-white. There are three scholarship prizes in each category consisting of U.S. Savings Bonds with maturity values of $1,000, $500 and $200. Other entries which demonstrate photographic excellence will receive certificates of merit. In addition, there's a Chief Scout's Executive Award of a $500 Savings Bond for the contestant with the best photograph portraying Scouting. The deadline for entries is Oct. 2, 1977. For rules and official entry forms, write: Scout Photo Scholarship Awards, Boy Scouts of America, North Brunswick, N.J. 08902.

"Picture Your World," a contest for amateur photographers sponsored by Photo Marketing Association International. There are three categories: Sports, Human Interest and Travel. Entries can either be in color or black-and-white but they will be judged together for each category. The prizes which winners in each category will aim for: American Airlines vacation packages for two in resort areas; Windjammer Cruises for two in the West Indies; or a share of $15,000 in cash provided by PMA. Each entry must be accompanied by an official entry blank available through participating photo retailers and photofinishers. The deadline is Oct. 31, 1977. For rules and location of your nearest participating dealer, write: PMA Picture Your World Contest, 603 Lansing Ave., Jackson, Mich. 49202.

Finally, follow these suggestions to give your photo contest entries the best possible advantage: 1. Read the rules carefully and follow them strictly. 2. Be your own tough judge first. Submit only those entries with visual impact, emotional appeal or significant content. 3. Make the best prints of which you are capable and as large as the rules allow. 4. Identify each print or transparency legibly with name and address. 5. Fill out entry blanks completely. 6. Monte Carlo Story Is A Sure Winner

THE MONEY SPINNER: Monte Carlo And Its Fabled Casino. By Xan Fielding. Little, Brown. 206 Pages. $8.95.

Contrary to the old song, there never was a man who broke the bank at Monte Carlo.

But there was a man who almost did. His name was Charles Deville Wells. As Xan Fielding observes in "The Money Spinner," "To break the bank would have meant emptying the reserves of all the gaming tables at once; an impossible feat for any single player or even for a large syndicate with unlimited means. But to break one table once in a lifetime was memorable enough; several times in one day was more remarkable still. To do so several days running was a never-to-be-forgotten event."

And that's what Wells did. His remarkable story as well as numerous other entertaining, informative anecdotes stud the text of this well-written, well-researched informal history of Monaco and the casino of Monte Carlo.

It has had its ups and downs since opening, and they are carefully detailed in this book as Fielding spins out a most absorbing tale of what life was like in Monte Carlo then and now.

Multiple Personality 'Eve' Tells of Her Many 'Faces'

By ANDREW ROSENTHAL

The 51-year-old woman — also known as Eve White, Eve Black and by 19 other names — says she became aware of herself as an individual for the first time about three years ago, when her deeply submerged personality awoke from what amounted to a 40-year slumber.

During that period, she said, her life was ruled, to the chagrin and pain of those close to her, by personalities manufactured by her own injured psyche.

Mrs. Sizemore was one of the world's most celebrated cases of multiple or fragmented personality. Her story gained popular attention from the film, "The Three Faces of Eve," which was inspired by the writings of her first psychiatrist, Dr. Corbett Thigpen.

As part of a long therapy with Dr. Tony Tsitos, she has written her own story, 20 years after the film was made, one year after she saw it for the first time. "I'm Eve" was coauthored by Mrs. Sizemore's cousin, Elen Sain Patillo.

In an interview in her New York hotel room, Mrs. Sizemore talked about her strange past, about her lives as Eve White, the Strawberry Girl, the Bell Lady, the Freckle Girl and others, all named for a character quirk manifested during their period of domination.

She recounted the circumstances of what seems to be her ultimate recovery.

"It was at the death of the Retrace Lady," she recalled of her final "face." "It was the 19th of June in 1974, by the way. I remember the exact instant.

CHRIS SIZEMORE

"When she died, there I was. Almost instantaneously, I was ready to create another one (personality). I felt so alone and terribly afraid."

Mrs. Sizemore said her fear was mixed with relief. At last, the woman who emerged seemed to be an adult version of the tortured child who had shut herself off from the world long ago, in a tiny North Carolina town, after a traumatic series of violent incidents.

Although Mrs. Sizemore and her doctors are certain that she is a healthy, whole person now, it was not the first time it had looked as though her life would resume a more normal course. After two years with Thigpen and Dr. Hervey Cleckley, in 1954 they had been satisfied that a final integration had taken place, Mrs. Sizemore said.

She then married Don Sizemore, her present husband, and tried to settle into a life of domesticity. But her problems reappeared, along with blinding headaches, fainting spells and amnesia.

"We were led to believe when we got married that all I had to do was love Chris and everything would be all right," her husband said. But then it started again.

"We didn't know when the next one was going to happen so I just learned to live with it," he continued.

Learning to live with it, he said, meant waking up one morning to a terrified woman who claimed she'd never seen him before. And it meant dealing with periods of blindness and muteness, too.

"I was so ashamed," said Mrs. Sizemore, making a tent of her fingertips and settling into a deep chair. She spoke calmly and with self-assurance, her round face creasing often into a smile.

"I thought I shouldn't be alive. I thought someone with a thing like that inside them didn't deserve to live."

But Mrs. Sizemore said she gradually came to understand herself. And when the Retrace Lady "died" she was sure her nightmare was over. For the first time, she's absorbed the memories of all the women and is "learning to deal with life differently," she said.

Mrs. Sizemore said she was starting to enjoy herself again. "I see things I've never seen before," she said. "Like bees on a leaf or grains of sand.

"That sounds so corny, I know, but it's true. I've been so busy existing, I haven't had time to live."

("I'm Eve" is published by Doubleday).

BOOK REVIEW

GOING BLIND. By Jonathan Penner. Simon & Schuster. 190 pages. $7.95.

This first novel concerns the emotional trauma, and adjustments, of a man going blind. In the case of this particular man, however, the degeneration of his sight is compounded because of people and circumstances.

The story concerns Paul Held, a professor at a New York college who finds himself about to fulfill a dream and marry the woman he loves, the wife of his best friend, who is dying of cancer.

Unfortunately, when his dream is about to come true after his friend's death, Held is injured in an auto accident and loses the sight of one eye. The remaining good eye undergoes a rapid deterioration. Thus his dilemma: Should he tell the woman he loves about his condition? She already has borne the agony of having a spouse suffering from a lengthy terminal illness. Also it is the final year in which he is to get teacher tenure and it might not be granted if he is incapacitated and unable to teach. And he is torn between his true love and a special relationship with a young student who has helped him through his trauma of going blind.

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Can you tell me the cause of aphthous ulcers in the mouth? Are they contagious? Can you suggest a reliable cure for such an ulcerated condition? What are the chances of a recurrence?

DEAR READER — As you know these are commonly called canker sores. I'm afraid we are not much better off in treating them than we are in dealing with the common cold.

The truth is we don't know what causes them, although there are several theories offered as an explanation. Some claim they are an allergy, others an immune response — which means that the body becomes allergic to part of its own tissues, in this case the tissues in the mouth. Still others think a virus is involved.

It follows that there is no good treatment. The best approach is to keep the mouth clean. Your doctor may want to coat the area with some relatively insoluble substance to protect it and promote healing. A new substance, Proxigel, is sometimes used for this purpose. Sometimes coating the area with silver nitrate helps. In any case they usually go away in a couple of weeks — and they return.

Any focus of irritation in the mouth such as ill-fitting dentures or a tooth out of line should be corrected. Some people do better avoiding certain foods, such as citrus fruits. Regardless of what is done, about a fifth of the population suffers from these unpleasant ulcers in the mouth at any one time. They apparently are not contagious.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I have two moles on my face which have never given me a problem. The last six to eight months I've been getting pimples right next to them. The moles become very sore, swell and are very irritated.

One mole has changed just slightly in color and in size. Is this normal, or should I be concerned? I'm in my late 20s and have a fairly good complexion. What could cause a pimple under a mole?

DEAR READER — Let me say at once, regardless of how old or young you are, if you ever have a mole that changes in any way get to the doctor as fast as you can and let him look at it. A changing mole can be a malignant melanoma, one of the more dangerous cancers, and it is quite different from the more harmless skin cancers. A change in color or size or in any other aspect of appearance is an indication to run to the nearest doctor.

A mole that is irritated for any reason is more likely to become malignant. Pimples tend to form where there are hair follicles. Since hair follicles are near or even in a mole you can have this happen. It is one way of causing irritation.

I have had a few people go to the doctor and get an early diagnosis of malignant melanoma because they have read this column. Their prompt action may have saved their lives. So, if you have a mole and it changes in any way don' just sit there, have it examined!

Greta Garbo now feels her life wasted

BONN, West Germany (AP) — Greta Garbo, who withdrew from public life 30 years ago, now feels she has lived a lonely, wasted life and "it's too late to change it," a West German magazine reports.

In what it claims is the 72-year-old Swedish movie queen's first interview since leaving the public scene, Bunte Illustrierte magazine quoted her as saying, "I have messed up my life. And it's too late to change it."

The magazine article said she spoke to a reporter who met her at a mutual friend's apartment in Klosters, a town in Switzerland's Graubuenden area.

She lives two summer months every year in a small furnished apartment in Klosters, where she reads, sleeps and waits — "I really don't know for what," Miss Garbo was quoted as saying.

The article described her as going for long walks even in rainy weather, her graying hair gathered in the nape of her neck by a rubber band, hatless and with her face devoid of cosmetics except a trace of lipstick.

She likes going to theater and opera in New York, where she lives most of the year.

HOME DESIGN
By Larry Farnsworth

Here's an attractive house featuring living areas on two levels with a garage on a third, lower level. It not only thus adapts well to available lot space and contour, but also adds drama to the highly practical floor plan.

Note the exterior details first — the charming effect of the stucco siding and brick combination, as well as the overall good looks created by the variation in house levels.

Inside, the big living room gains drama both from the deck just outside, and the unique view — over the railing — of the dining room on the higher level at the back of the house.

Beyond the dining room, stretching out at the rear of the house on this same level, are the practical kitchen, with its efficiently planned, U-shaped work area particularly well supplied with counter and storage space, and the large, pleasant family room, just across the handy counter.

Before shifting attention to the bedroom area of this model, take another look at the front entry, giving special notice to that well placed powder room. And note, too, the good looking effect of the railinged off family room as seen immediately upon entering this home.

Here are two bedrooms at the back, and an attractive master bedroom at the front. Afforded maximum privacy because of its higher level, and boasting its own private deck, it also has a separate bath, flanked by a pair of roomy closets, and a big walk-in closet as well.

Social Security ills pose dilemma for Congress

WASHINGTON (AP) — Social Security pays benefits to 33.3 million persons and collects taxes from 108 million workers and their employers. It's also running out of money.

But Congress has no intention of letting benefits to the elderly, disabled, widows and dependents be cut off or reduced.

It will start in earnest on the business of finding the needed money Sept. 12, when the House Ways and Means Social Security subcommittee begins putting together new financing legislation.

Witnesses already have described the uneasiness of the retired about the future of the system. Active workers, who in many instances are paying more in Social Security taxes than in income tax — up to $965.25 this year and probably $1,070.85 next year — worry that the load may become back-breaking and still leave them with no assurance of security in old age.

Since 1975 Social Security has been paying out more than it receives from the payroll taxes levied to support it.

It has been drawing down its reserves to keep up the payments. Latest estimates are that, if nothing were done, the trust fund for payments to those who retired for disability would be exhausted by late 1978 or early 1979 and current receipts would be insufficient for payments.

The corresponding fund for those who retired for age, and for their dependents, is not projected to last beyond about 1983 unless replenished.

Everyone agrees Social Security's financial problem is real and serious and that Congress must act quickly during the waning months of its 1977 session. But the agreement stops there.

The lawmakers are faced with what is always one of their most painful decisions: Who will pay?

Any tax increase runs counter to the efforts of President Carter and the Democratic majority to stimulate the lagging economy, while any additional spending not covered by taxes enlarges the deficit, threatens Carter's goal of budget balance by 1981, and may retard the growth of business confidence needed to provide job-building private investment.

Carter sent Congress early this year a package of proposals desivned to see Social Security through its immediate financial pinch and make a start toward solving longer range problems that could cause the system even greater difficulties after the year 2000.

But at least one of the major elements in Carter's package is in deep trouble in Congress and no consensus on alternatives is in sight.

In times of unemployment, payroll tax receipts fall below estimates. Disbursements go up because more people retire early, and under existing law inflation automatically boosts the payments.

The trust funds are designed to carry the system over temporary slumps. The long economic woes of the 1970's proved them inadequate.

In 1970 the size of the trust funds were equal to a year's disbursements. By the beginning of this year they had fallen to half that and were continuing to decline.

Additionally, for reasons not fully understood, retirements for disability have outrun projections.

There are two major reasons for Social Security's longer-range problems, that could come to a head about 2010 unless corrected.

One is the changing age mix of the U.S. population. There are now about three workers to one beneficiary. In the next century the ratio may be two to one, meaning a bigger drain on each wage earner to help support the pensioner.

The other long-range threat to the system, one easier to pinpoint and correct, is a faulty formula for computing the future benefits of persons presently working.

In effect, it compensates twice for inflation. Unless changed, it could permit retirees by the year 2000 to draw benefits higher than their best working-year earnings.

In addition, there are anomalies and inequities in the system that call for reform, especially provisions widely regarded as unfair to women. The courts already have mandated some changes.

Congress certainly will not cure all of Social Security's ills this year or next.

It may well tackle the job in three installments — a quick temporary fix, perhaps involving borrowings among the various trust funds or from the Treasury; more substantial refinancing legislation, perhaps next year; thorough reform left to future congresses.

Carter's package addressed principally Social Security's short-range financing problems.

The administration's most controversial proposal is to transfer over the next three years $14.1 billion of general revenues — essentially the proceeds of the income tax — to the Social Security trust funds.

The shift would be intended to compensate for payroll tax receipts lost because unemployment has remained above 6 per cent since 1975. Whether such transfers would be permanently authorized whenever unemployment exceeded 6 per cent was left open for future study.

In a test vote, the Senate finance committee split 11 to 3 against the proposal.

The proposed transfer came under immediate and heavy fire not only from business groups, Republicans, some former Social Security officials and some economists, but also from the two congressional committee chairmen who will have most to do with the legislation. These are Rep. Al Ullman, D-Oe., of Ways and Means, and Sen. Russell B. Long, D-La., of Senate Finance.

The AFL-CIO and major organizations of older Americans generally support the administration package, including the transfer. Some economists agree. Chairman James A. Burke, D-Mass., of the Social Security subcommittee has long advocated a regular contribution of general funds.

Ullman and Long have taken the position that so long as the government as a whole is operating in the red, it is poor policy to cover one deficit by increasing another.

Both have said more revenues will have to be found for Social Security, if not by increasing the payroll tax, then by finding some new source. Both have suggested that a value added tax — a form of national sales tax — may be worth considering.

The argument about using general revenues for part of the cost of Social Security is as old as the system. Most of the other industrialized countries with similar systems do so.

When the U.S. plan was being developed in President Franklin D. Roosevelt's administration, use of general revenue money was considered. The decision, however, was to rely on a payroll tax imposed equally on employers and employes.

Congress generally has held to that principle over the decades. It has increased the tax as the system has expanded to cover more people and provide greater benefits.

General revenues have been added only for special, limited purposes, and for the government's part of the Medicare doctor bill coverage.

The yield of the payroll tax can be enlarged by increasing the rate, raising the ceiling on wages subject to tax, or both.

The rate, now 5.85 per cent each on employes and employers, will go to 6.05 per cent Jan. 1 even if the law is not changed. The maximum wage base, now $16,500, will be increased next year, probably to $17,700.

Boosting the payroll tax yield by raising the ceiling on taxable earnings has appeal in Congress because it does not increase the burden on lower paid employes, while a rate raise hits everyone.

But since only about 15 per cent of workers earn more than the taxable maximum, the Congressional Budget Office estimates, it would take an increase of 63 per cent in the ceiling to raise as much revenue in the next six years as a 1 per cent increase in the combined employer-employe rate.

He would, by stages, beginning in 1979, eliminate the ceiling so far as the employer's tax is concerned, so that by 1981 the employer would be paying on his entire payroll.

The ceiling on earnings for the employe's tax would be raised in four steps, beginning in 1979, so that by 1985 the projected ceiling would be $30,300.

Carter's package contains other tax changes.

Present law contemplates an increase in the payroll tax rate of 1 per cent each on employes and employers in the year 2011. The administration would advance the change, putting one quarter of it into effect in 1985 and the other three-quarters in 1990.

The administration also proposes restoring the tax rate on self-employed persons to one and one-half times the employe rate. It has fallen in recent years to about one and one-third times.

The package also includes a new benefit formula to eliminate the double adjustment for inflation. Those already retired would not be affected and those retiring soon only minimally. The principle is unopposed, but there is some disagreement as to the exact formula.

If all its programs are adopted, the administration told Congress, the trust funds will have adequate balances by the end of 1982 and the system will be safely financed well into the next century.

Labor leadership power shifting to new breed of union official

WASHINGTON (AP) — The American labor movement is undergoing a managerial revolution that has produced the most sweeping leadership changes since the 1940s, with power passing to a new breed of union official.

AFL-CIO President George Meany still dominates the giant labor federation, but for the first time his legislative lobbying and political tactics are being challenged. Some of the new, younger union presidents have even urged him publicly to retire.

"He's 83 and he should get out and let somebody a little younger and a little closer to us get on with it," says the outspoken William W. Winpisinger, newly elected president of the International Association of Machinists. At 53, he is 30 years younger than Meany.

Death and retirement in the last three years have brought to power a new generation of leaders in the construction trades, the clothing unions and more than a dozen major industrial unions.

This year alone, the nation's three largest industrial unions — the machinists, the auto and steelworkers — elected new leaders. By year's end, only two of the 33 union presidents who make up the AFL-CIO's policy-making executive council will have served on the council longer than eight years.

The new leaders generally are younger and better educated than the old-timers of labor's rough and tumble days. Several have law degrees. They are also, for the most part, more liberal politically and more militant in their attitude toward organizing new members.

"Today's labor leader is far better equipped to handle the tough economic issues that come up at the bargaining table, and they know how to read a profit and loss statement or a computer printout," says Al Zack, the AFL-CIO's long-time spokesman. And, he adds, "They all read the Wall Street Journal."

But Zack and other observers think the new group of leaders will have more impact on style than on substance.

"The changes are not as apt to be as dramatic as some people think because the basic fundamentals of wages, hours and working conditions will still be the fundamentals," says another labor veteran.

The building trades unions, traditionally the labor movement's most conservative element, are beginning to show change under new leaders.

Long criticized for their exclusionary policies, the craft unions are actively recruiting minorities and women. They also have begun easing restrictive work practice rules to become more competitive with nonunion contractors who are taking a larger share of building jobs.

New leadership in the needle trades has given new life to these unions, now campaigning to organize Southern textile factories and restrict clothing imports that have caused the loss of American jobs.

The emergence of Winpisinger, Douglas Fraser of the auto workers, Glenn Watts of the communications workers and Lloyd McBride of the steelworkers is likely to give new strength to labor's liberal wing.

They believe organized labor should shed its "middle-class image" and focus attention once again on broad economic and social policy issues.

"If you're going to rally support behind your programs you're going to have to show concern not only about your members but all the people in our society," says the 60-year-old Fraser.

"You've got to prove to the people of this country that the labor movement is concerned about all the people, not just those who happen to be paying dues into the labor organizations."

But until and unless Fraser can bring his union back into the AFL-CIO, he will have no say on federation policy. The UAW left the AFL-CIO in 1968 in a policy and personality dispute between Meany and Walter Reuther, who was then UAW president.

Fraser, a political liberal who rose through his union's ranks after going to work as a metal polisher in a Chrysler Corp. plant, favors reaffiliation on the grounds that a united labor movement is in the best interest of workers. But there is strong opposition within the UAW, in part because of rank-and-file objection to Meany's continued leadership.

The AFL-CIO's Zack rejects the criticism from the new leaders and young union members. He contends that, under Meany, the labor federation is already "liberal and leftist" and notes that it led the fight in Congress for the Civil Rights Act. And now, Zack adds, the AFL-CIO is in the forefront of the battle for a higher minimum wage and the establishment of a national health insurance program.

Within the past year, perhaps in response to pressure from the new union presidents, the AFL-CIO has become more aggressive toward organizing new members and has made reform of federal labor law to ease organizing its No. 1 legislative priority.

As for Meany, there had been speculation that he would retire this year. But, with his health improved after recent ailments, he now says he will seek another two-year term at the AFL-CIO convention in December. He is not likely to be opposed.

Hill couple teaches folk arts and crafts

KELLEN HOLLOW, Ky. (AP) — Want to learn how to make a dried apple doll, play the harmonica, forecast the weather by crows, or how to cure snake bite with a home remedy?

Then head for the hills.

The hills of northeastern Kentucky is where you'll find John and Mary Lozier practicing and teaching the arts of Applachian life passed down to them from their parents and grandparents.

The Loziers still live pretty much like their parents did before them on their 35-acre farm tucked away in the hills of Greenup County.

Each weekend, they play host and teachers to a group of Ohio State University students taking a course on Appalachian Folklore under the university's Creative Arts Program.

"They come down and we talk to them about the old arts and crafts," said Mrs. Lozier. "They stay two days and I do the cooking."

The students are treated to hearty hill dishes — fried dried apple pie, corn bread, biscuits, fried sausage and Mrs. Lozier's own canned vegetables and fruits.

The kitchen of the farmhouse, built before the turn of the century, has been modernized with an electric stove and running water but the cooking is still that of an earlier era.

Her 68-year-old husband is the expert on farming the hard way with a small hand plow and a hoe. He's also the music expert, using his harmonica to play the rollicking tunes and ballads of an earlier time. Sometimes Mrs. Lozier, 63, sings along with the music. The two have performed on OSU's Columbus, Ohio, campus several times.

Neither of the Loziers made it to high school.

"I have an eighth grade formal education and my husband has about a fourth grade," said Mrs. Lozier. "I went to school in a one-room schoolhouse in Rock Creek that had eight grades," she added.

Despite the absence of formal education, the couple keep the college students spellbound with knowledge they've acquired.

"They seem very interested. Theynd the ones that have medicinal value," said Mrs. Lozier, who has raised five sons of her own.

"We do a lot of the things we do because we do it the way our parents did it, but there's a scientific reason behind most of it," she said.

FAIR WARNING is ignored by a fellow who can't resist a peak at what's going on beyond the fence — which turned out to be a baseball season opener. But who knows? It might have been something as startling as (below) . . .

By PAUL STEVENS
Associated Press Writer

CHANUTE, Kan. (AP) — The rolling hills of southeast Kansas are 8,000 miles and another world removed from East Africa, but a bit of the Dark Continent's heritage is preserved in a two-story, converted railroad building in downtown Chanute.

The Safari Museum is a tribute to Martin and Osa Johnson, an adventurous Kansas couple who became world famous as explorers, photographers, authors and naturalists during the early part of this century.

Its artifacts draw 7,000 to 8,000 visitors each year into the unimposing structure nestled among downtown businesses and the Santa Fe Railroad freight warehouse.

"People are very surprised to find this right in the middle of Kansas," said Dorothy Wilson, an assistant at the museum. "But they're pleasantly surprised and I hope they pass it on."

The museum, one of five in Kansas accredited by the American Association of Museums, opened in 1961 in a building donated by Santa Fe to the city.

Neither of the Johnsons lived to see its creation. Martin Johnson died in a plane crash in 1937 and Osa died of a heart attack in 1953.

"They apparently had an agreement whereby whichever one of them died last, that side of the family inherited the collection," Mrs. Wilson said. "Osa died last and her mother got the things."

Osa's mother, Mrs. Belle Leighty, who died here in 1976 at the age of 99, gave the Johnsons' collection to the city with the stipulation that it be publicly displayed.

Martin Johnson was living in Independence, Kan., when in 1907 at the age of 21 he got the chance to travel around the world with author Jack London on London's yacht, "The Snark." In assembling a crew, London advertised for a ship's cook. Johnson applied and got the job, but he was said to have spent the entire summer learning to cook.

After the trip, Johnson returned to Independence for a short time and was married to Osa Leighty of Chanute. They soon began their travels to East Africa and the South Seas in earnest.

"I think Martin had a premonition things were going to change, that there would soon come a time when animals would no longer be free and roaming," Mrs. Wilson said.

The Johnsons began preserving the undisturbed sanctuary of animal life and primitive peoples on film, producing 10 full-length movies. They also were active writers. Johnson's first book, "Through the South Seas with Jack London," was published in 1913.

Johnson wrote a total of eight books and Osa wrote 10, many of them after her husband's death. The museum has copies of all the books and it is working to obtain prints of the motion pictures.

A reminder that the couple was also active in safari hunting is preserved on a wall of the museum — a blanket made from the skins of 12 leopards.

Many ecology-minded visitors become mildly upset by the display, Mrs. Wilson said. "But they did that in 1922, we tell them," she said. "But they say, 'Oh, yes, but 12 animals?' The Johnsons also trapped some animals and sold them to zoos, including five cheetahs they sold to the St. Louis Zoo."

Among the exhibits in the museum are a South Seas Devil-Devil, Masai hunting spears and shields from East Africa, and portraits of primitive African peoples and cannibals from the South Seas.

Mrs. Wilson said one of the most popular exhibits was a collection of African artifacts donated by Dr. Pascal Imperato, health commissioner of New York City and a former physician in Mali.

More than 200 masks, statues, musical instruments, household items and religious objects from more than 30 tribal groups are contained in the collection on the second floor of the museum. The display was officially opened in 1974.

Museum director Keith Bollwahn said he hoped to further open the museum's facilities to researchers and also planned a traveling exhibit to introduce Kansans to the museum.

SCHOOLROOM TURNED NEST for a machine gun is now a playground for youngster in Majdelaya, Lebanon. Building was heavily damaged during fighting. UNICEF has announced plans to assist in rebuilding damaged schools.

THE FAMILY CIRCUS. By Bil Keane

Today in U.S. History

By The Associated Press

Today is Wednesday, September 7th, the 250th day of 1977. There are 115 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1940, German bombers began the World War II raids against London which were to become known as the "London Blitz."

On this date:

In 1533, England's Queen Elizabeth I was born.

In 1825, the French hero of the American Revolution, the Marquis de Lafayette, said his last farewell to President John Adams at the White House.

In 1930, work began on Boulder Dam, now known as Hoover Dam, on the Colorado River.

Ten years ago: A White House panel recommended the establishment of a new federal bank to lend money to qualified students for college education, with 30 to 40 years to pay.

One year ago: A Soviet pilot who flew a Russian MIG-25 to Japan was granted political asylum in the United States.

Thought for today: All the world's a stage and all the men and women merely players — William Shakespeare.

Andy Griffith hoping films lead to series

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Think of Andy Griffith and you may think of a good old boy who'd rather loaf than labor. But lately he's been busier than a flute player's upper lip during the William Tell Overture.

Last night, the country boy who sprang to fame as a rustic sheriff on CBS for eight years popped up as President of the United States in the openinv stanza of ABC's "Washington: Behind Closed Doors."

And last week, he was at MGM, finishing the second of two TV movies — playing Abel Marsh, a gunless sheriff at a California lake resort — in what he hopes will become a one-hour weekly series on NBC.

Griffith, 45, a tall, surprisingly intense native of Mt. Airy, N.C., said his new venture is the third version of an idea he's been hot on for several years, a rural cop show featuring both humor and mystery.

He said the first version aired on ABC about three years ago — with him in it — as a movie called "Winter Kill." He wanted to make it a series but the network didn't.

Despite high ratings, he said, "they choose not to have it on the air (as a series) because it showed earth instead of asphalt.

"They were afraid — because I have a Southern accent and the show was set in a small town — that right away it was 'Green Acres' or 'Petticoat Junction.'"

Things moldered until a writer, Lane Slate, did a similar show about a lake resort sheriff, a James Garner movie called "They Only Kill Their Masters," Griffith said.

Then, he added, he and his long-time partner, Richard O. Linke, consulted with Slate, struck a deal with both Slate and NBC to make two Sheriff Abel Marsh movies, and began filming at Big Beaf, Calif.

Griffth spoke of all this while consuming commissary eats with Linke, an MGM press agent and a visiting scribe.

He also discussed with Linke assorted battle plans to publicize his Sept. 20 film, including an appearance on the Dinah Shore show, a five-city tour and 33 telephone interviews in three days. Hope also was expressed a booking on NBC's "Today" show could be arranged.

Griffith, who seemed a bit harried, said all this concentrated drum-beating was necessary. The air date of his first "Abel" had been moved up a month, shortening the time he has to urge folks to watch it.

If a lot of folks watch it, NBC could order it as a series. And a series is definitely what the tall Tarheel wants to do.

The star of the successful "Andy Griffith Show" and unsuccessful "New Andy Griffith Show" grinned when reminded that TV's oldest cliche is that of the exhausted star vowing never to do another series.

"Well, I thought that at one time," conceded the broad-shouldered ex-high school teacher. "But all actors, when they're working real hard, don't want to work.

"But when they're not working, they want to work. We're all that way."

Even greenhorn can win as casino dealer

RENO, Nev. (AP) — You'd think Harold's Club was taking a big chance, letting a greenhorn deal blackjack with the casino's money. But it's clear now even a beginner can sustain what everyone should know: the odds are with the house.

After two hours, the table had about as much money as when the novice began dealing — $3,000 or so.

One thing's for sure. The world of the casino is different from the dealer's side of the green felt table. The noise melts away, the room seems smaller and time is not important. And dealing cards to customers anxious to win big money is not at all like dealing a poker hand to the boys Saturday night.

When Harolds Club, one of Reno's oldest casinos, tossed out the challenge — deal, with their money — at the club one afternoon, well, who could pass it up?

First there was a crash course on dealing — covering things like the shuffle, doubling down, splitting cards, table etiquette and more.

You think you know how to deal 21? Try it with five people staring at you. The palms sweat, the cards clump as they're shuffled or buckle under pressure.

Nevertheless, the greenhorn stumbles through four shuffles, strips the deck, turns it, let a player cut. Then he burns the top card, checks the bets and deals.

Professionals run through the procedure in seconds. It took your novice longer.

After two hours' dealing, the shoulders were stiff, the eyes strained, the body moist and the mind filled with a new appreciation for what thousands do daily.

Several veteran gamblers — they looked that way — played only a single hand at the beginner's $1 table. Others, told what was going on, stayed.

They got a kick out of it, and as assistant floorman Bill Parga watched, correcting mistakes, the players learned some things they weren't aware of. Parga, for example, spread a new deck on the table, explaining it must be checked front and back for irregularities.

"Sometimes we get two aces of the same suit or a card with a name other than Harolds on the back," he said.

"That's so the deck is always changed, just in case someone is marking," Parga replied.

Watch a dealer some time, notice how smoothly he or she picks up the bet or pays it, then deftly gathers the cards to the discard tray.

The greenhorn tried. Cards went one way, money another. The money was miscounted, a bet or two mispaid. But Harolds' money was safe — Parga was there.

Grover Cleveland

Grover Cleveland is ranked, according to a ruling by the State Department, as both the 22nd and 24th President of the United States. He is the only Chief Executive to have served two nonconsecutive terms. First elected in 1884, he was defeated for reelection in 1888 by Benjamin Harrison, although he led in the popular vote. He ran against Harrison again in 1892 and won.

Comptroller sees no reason to prosecute

WASHINGTON (AP) — The comptroller of the currency said today he found no reason to prosecute Budget Director Bert Lance or anyone else for several of Lance's private loans and overdrafts but questioned some of the banking practices involved.

The new report was on two of the lesser issues in the controversy over Lance's banking transactions. The comptroller is still preparing a report on Lance's use of bank aircraft and on the comptroller office's original investigation of Lance.

In his new report, Comptroller John Heimann traced a pattern of loans to Mr. and Mrs. Lance from the Fulton National Bank of Atlanta while Lance was president of the Calhoun, Ga., First National Bank.

As in some of Lance's other loans, the Calhoun bank had a "correspondent relationship" with the Fulton bank. This means the Calhoun bank deposited money without interest at the Fulton bank in exchange for services, a common banking practice. In each case, the comptroller's office has been trying to decide if Lance's bank kept extra money on deposit at the larger bank so Lance could get his loan.

The report said the Fulton bank "looked in some measure to the maintenance of

Wilson City man is critically wounded

Deputy Sheriff Robert Smith said today Leonard Wiley, 29, of Wilson City is in critical condition in the intensive care unit at the hospital, where he was taken following the shooting shortly before 10 p.m. Tuesday.

Wiley was shot once at close range with a .410 single-shot shotgun. The shot passed through his right arm into the right side of the chest.

Mason is being held in Mississippi County jail on a charge of felonious assault.

Circumstances leading to the shooting were not known this morning. Smith said Mason, who was arrested by Smith and Wyatt City Marshall John Pearson, was intoxicated at the time of the shooting and has been unable to provide information. Wiley has also been unable to tell authorities what led to the shooting.

New industry breaks ground at E. Prairie

EAST PRAIRIE — Groundbreaking for C. B. Forms, Inc., 309 Mill St., the first industry to locate in the city's nine-acre industrial park, was held at 1 p.m. Tuesday.

Company personnel, city officials, Chamber of Commerce representatives and local businessmen were present for the groundbreaking ceremonyy.

Richard Bell of East Prairie is co-owner and president of the new firm, which will produce snap-out and continuous forms and specialty printing of optical character recognization (OCR) for computers and scanners. Jack Curran of St. Louis is also co-owner.

Con P. Curran Printing Co. of St. Louis will act as sales agency and will be the main supplier of sales.

Construction of the 100-by- 150-feet prefab metal building will start immediately and is expected to be completed in about six-weeks. The 15,000 feet building will have 1,500 feet of office space. McTigue Construction Co. of East Prairie is the contractor.

Bell said the company should begin production in about eight weeks, depending upon completion of construction, and plans call for employment of 20 persons by the end of the first year.

Bell has been in the printing business since 1961. He has been employed by Con P. Curran Printing Co., Holiday Press in Memphis, Tenn. and Witt Printing Co. of El Dorado Springs, where he was manager. Until recently Bell was vice president of Delta Business Forms of Cairo, Ill.

Bell and his wife, Sharon, have two sons, Todd and Scott Bell, and reside on South Martin Street, near the south city limits.

Judge disqualifies self in murder trial

Holt, 35, is accused of offering $1000 to his girlfriend's cousin, Roger Dale Jackson, 19, to murder Mrs. Joyce Holt on Nov. 23, 1976.

Judge Ragland, who called the disqualification "a matter of course" allowed defense counsel under Missouri law, said Circuit Court Judge Marshall Craig of Sikeston will be the presiding judge. A new date for the trial, which was set to begin today, has not yet been determined.

The motion for Ragland's disqualification was filed last week by Holt's attorney, Jim Ed Reeves of Caruthersville.

Holt was arrested several days after his wife's murder when 18-year-old Wanda McAllister, also of Bragg City, told deputies that Holt and she were lovers and that the grocer had planned to kill his wife because she refused to grant him a divorce.

Miss McAllister, granted immunity for her testimony at the preliminary hearing last December, said that Holt told her how he had failed at least five times to carry out the murder of his wife. She said his plans included drowning, electric shock and shooting, all arranged to look like accidents.

At the preliminary hearing, Miss McAllister's cousin, Roger Jackson, admitted to killing Mrs. Holt after Holt promised to erase his grocery debts. Jackson, then an unemployed farm laborer and the father of two small children, said he almost backed out of the deal at the last minute but feared Mrs. Holt wouldn't believe his story. He said he therefore shot her four times and ran.

Jackson, who is also awaiting trial for murder, is being held in the Pemiscot County jail after an escape attempt two weeks ago. Holt is free on a $2,500 property bond.

Hearing set on massage parlor issue

Attorneys of the city of Sikeston and the Scorpio Massage parlor, 1117 W. Malone Ave., will present arguments Sept. 14 during a preliminary injunction hearing before Judge Marshal Craig in Scott County Circuit Court at Benton.

The injunction seeks to prevent Sikeston from enforcing its new massage parlor ordinance, which sets strict guidelines for massage parlor operation.

Scorpio Massage is continuing to operate during the legal maneuvering. City officials says K's Massage Parlor, 223 W. Trotter St., has either closed or is inthe process of closing.

Proposed kindergarten clears another hurdle

The proposed new kindergarten for the Sikeston R-6 School District nearly hit a roadblock Tuesday night at the City Council meeting when a nearby property owner unsuccessfully insisted the council relocate the proposed extension of Salcedo Road.

The council was considering an ordinance approving the subdivision of the school site, when attorneys Joe and Bob Fuchs challenged the location of the proposed extension of Salcedo Road, which will lead to the new school.

They were representing their mother, who owns 103 acres between the Matthews property and Collins North Acres. The property is land-located with no roads leading into it.

Joe Fuchs did most of the arguing. He said the proposed extension of the Salcedo Road would logically continue due east from the kindergarten complex to Ingram Street.

That would put Salcedo Road about a block north of the Fuchs property line. Only two small streets, Spring and Plaza drives, would lead into the 103 acres.

Fuchs said the city plan shows Salcedo Road continuing east in a straight line from where it now ends on the west side of North Main Street. That would run the street through the Fuchs property.

Fuchs asked that the council refuse to agree to locate the school at that site and have it moved south so that Salcedo Road would extend into his mother's land; or to require that the street curve south to the north edge of the Fuchs property.

They pointed out that the city plan was not binding, that the Matthews donated the land where they wanted it to go, and that the council was only approving the road extension to the school, not all the way to Ingram Road.

A piece of clothesline wire was thrown into a transformer at the Missouri Utilities substation on DeField Street, causing the power outage on the west side of town, Abner said. Power was restored in about two hours.

Banks Body Shop on East Main Street was entered by twisting the front door lock. Money was taken from vending machines in the shop.

The front door lock at Mississippi County Gas and Oil Co., owned by Bill Adkison, was forced. An undetermined amount of money and a radio was taken from the office of the company, also located on East Main Street.

The fourth break-in occurred at Hall's Tavern on E. Main Street. The lock on a northside door was twisted off and money from vending machines, plus a large amount of cigarettes, were taken. Larry Smith is owner of the tavern.

Attempts were made to enter the Country Bumpkin Restaurant and Shell Service Station on Highway 80, near the west city limits. In both incidents attempts had beenmade to force backdoor locks.

Abner said day police officers were called on duty to assist night officers during the blackout. This is the second incident in recent weeks where break-ins have occurred during power outages that were deliberately caused, Abner said.

A complete report on the stolen items will not be available until inventories at the four businesses have been made. The investigation was continuing this morning, Abner said.

Man, deposits missing

DEXTER — A wrrant charging embezzelment of $27,236.50 in cash and checks was issued Tuesday against Bob Corwin of Sikeston, according to Stoddard County Prosecuting Attorney Philip Ayers.

Corwin, an employe of the Wal-Mart Store at Dexter, was last seen Monday when leaving the store with money to deposit in the bank.

Ayers said the $27,236.50 represents four store deposits, which were to be made by Corwin on Saturday and for three deposits on Monday, which were handled by Corwin.

The whereabouts of Corwin is unknown at this time, according to the prosecutor.

Zoning issue comes back to council

A Sikeston realtor brought his request for a rezoning back tothe City Council Tuesday night for a second time, wanting to know why the request was denied.

The council approved paying the dues to the Bootheel Regional Planning Commission and adding a new engineering firm to the power plant project.

Rezoning

J. R. James, 733 Goodhope St., asked the Council for its reasons in rejecting his request to rezone his section of Goodhope Street from single family to commercial.

The Planning and Zoning Commision rejected his request in April. He appealed to the council, which also rejected the request.

Councilman Lewis Conley told him that residential areas have deteriorated in other parts of town because of rezonings such as James requested.

Mayor Eric Piel said the neighbors who had protested the proposal were not concerned with what James did with the property while he owned it, but with what would happen in the future.

A group of area residents are reportedly circulating a petition trying to get southern half of Goodhope returned to residential from its present multiple family zoning.

James wanted to know what the council would do. Conley said he would not commit himself, but would look favorably on it. Steve Sikes said he would not have voted to rezone the street from single family to multiple family in the first place.

BPRC dues

The council decided to pay its dues to the Bootheel Regional Planning Commission despite a substantial increase. The dues are for the new year are $3,380 up from $2,645 last year.

One reason for the dues increase, according to Ron Yersak of the commission is, that Stoddard County is not paying its dues this year.

The council had questioned paying the dues because the BPRC has done little for Sikeston and works mostly for smaller communities.

Along with the decision to pay the dues, the council decided to appoint a member to sit on the commission and represent Sikeston's interests. Mayor Piel will either sit on the commission or designate some one else.

Pat Lea and Yersak gave the council reports on the BPRC history and operations.

Power Plant

The council approved adding the engineering firm of Burns, McDonnell to the power plant design team. Phelps, Hogland Engineering will continue to head the engineering team.

Burns, McDonnell will provide most of the engineers and between 75 and 80 per cent of the design work.

The new firm was added for two reasons. Burns, McDonnell is a nationally known firm and can help the city get a lower interest rate on its bond issue and Phelps, Hogland is a small firm, which would have had to hire 30 or 40 engineers to handle the project.

The addition of the new firm will not increase the project's cost.

Paving projects

The Council approved a bid from W. S. McMullin Co. for the paving of Blanton Avenue at a cost of $8.50 per foot. McMullin was the only bidder.

The council gave the go ahead to call for bids for the paving of an alleysouth of the elderly housing project between School and Stoddard streets.

Building permits

City Manager Charles Church said that in 1976 the city issued 103 building permits for single family homes. In the first six months of this year, 99 permits have been issued.

Other action

The council approved transfer of a five per cent consumption beer license from King Arthur Lounge in the Kingsway Mall to Imperial Bowling Lanes.

FLAWED IMMIGRATION PROGRAM

President Carter has recognized the grave problem posed by the estimated 6 million to 12 million illegal aliens in this country. But his program to deal with it seems flawed and unworkable.

In his message to Congress, Carter correctly said "millions of undocumented aliens . . . have breached our nation's immigration laws, displaced many American citizens from jobs and placed an increased financial burden on many states and local governments."

Carter proposed the following major steps:

—Amnesty for foreigners who sneaked into the country before 1970 and lived here continuously since. They could stay, be eligible for most forms of federal aid and bring in their parents, spouses and children.

—"Nondeportable" status for those who came between 1970 and last Jan. 1. They could remain and work for five years after the law takes effect.

—Civil fines for employers who engage in a "pattern" of "knowingly" hiring illegal aliens.

—Adding 2,000 agents (about 40 per cent) to the undermanned border patrol in hopes of slowing the flood of illegal border crossers.

Carter's proposed penalty of a $1,000 fine for hiring an illegal alien is weak and riddled with outs. For example, an employer would get off if the worker showed him a Social Security card. Forgeries are cheap and easy to come by.

In fact, the forgery of "amnesty kits"—faked documents— has become an industry in Mexican border towns in anticipation of amnesty.

Aliens will have great incentive to be able to "prove" they were in the country before 1970 or before the start of 1977, and massive resort to forgery must be expected. Since millions of persons may be involved, immigration offices and the courts will be unable to deal with the pressure.

If Carter's suggestions pass Congress, as a practical matter everyone who can show he was here before 1977 will be able to remain indefinitely — and eventually to bring his relatives. The typical alien has five members of his immediate family at home, and thus our population could swell by as many as 40 million people in the next few years.

And this in a country that is having desperate trouble providing enough jobs for its own citizens.

Not only that, but in the minds of impoverished Mexican peasants — the major source of illegal immigration — one amnesty will be followed by another. They will figure if they can get into America and hide for a few years, they too will benefit from a future dispensation.

The only indisputable part of the Carter program is the need for a strengthened border patrol. The 2,000 extra men the President wants should be hired fast. They'll have their work cut out for them as soon as word of his amnesty spreads south of the border.

The stability of a national economy may be measured by many means. One of the best measures is long range security assurance to the individual citizen.

Life insurance is one form of long range security. Individuals in the United States own more than a trillion dollars of life insurance.

This giant investment in the future is one of the major forces responsible for the progressive growth of the American economy. It is good evidence that the American is basically prudent and that immediate consumer spending rests on a good cushion of assets.

Ironically, the American insurance business is largely a creature of advertising. Although advertising has been blamed for causing unnecessary spending it may be credited with stimulating organized savings and financial security programs of fantastic scope.

Since the turn of the century, insurance companies have been among the largest and most consistent of advertisers. Insurance advertising has more than kept pace with the increase in per capita income. Even nonprofit step to a final sales in consistent newspaper advertising.

Insurance companies, investment brokers, banks and savings associations use advertising just as a retailer does. The consumer needs information on how to save just as he does on how to spend.

ENVIRONMENTAL GOOD NEWS

Mother Nature is apparently tougher and more resilient than we think, at least as far as oil spills are concerned.

A study by Massachusetts Institute of Technology has found that the fragile ecologies of coastal areas can survive and, given enough time, recover from the effects of this kind of pollution.

There have never been more massive oil spills than occurred during World War II. In the first six months of 1942 alone, tankers sunk by German U-boats dumped more than 3.4 million barrels of oil and gasoline off the Atlantic coast.

This is five times more oil than was involved in history's worst single spill, the Torrey Canyon disaster off England in 1967, and 20 times the cargo carried by the Argo Merchant, which broke up off Massachusetts last December.

The MIT study, which was funded by a grant from the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, focused on two areas hit by the wartime spills: Ocracoke Island, N.C., where more than 160,000 barrels came ashore, and northern New Jersey coast waters, which were sheared with 264,000 barrels.

The researchers found that in both cases, "regional wildlife and economy (fishing) survived with minimal difficulty."

This is immensely encouraging, but no cause for complacency. What it really means is that the only reason we did not long ago damage vast stretches of the world's coastlines beyond repair is not because of human wisdom but thanks to sheer dumb luck.

There are limits to the environment's capacity to absorb and rebound from human abuse. If we have fortunately not exceeded them in the case of oil spills, we may be pressing dangerously close in other areas.

XXX

COMPLIANCE IS UP TO STATES

As Congress wrestles with the decision to grant the automakers a postponement of stringent new pollution standards — scheduled to go into effect on 1978 model cars— it is important to keep one thing in mind.

It is not, as some people have irresponsibly claimed, a matter of permitting the industry "to go on building dirty cars." The industry has been building progressively cleaner cars since the mid-1960s, when the first emission-control devices began to be installed, and especially since passage of the Clear Air Act in 1970.

Even if the 1978 requirements were postponed indefinitely—which they won't be— the average level of automobile-generated poolutants would continue to decline as older cars were retired to the scrapyard.

Rather, it is becoming a question of just how much we may realistically expect from automotive technology in refining the conventional internal-combustion engine, and whether we may be reaching the point where the costs of doing so begin to outweigh the benefits.

The 1978 standards, if achieved, would bring us close to the level of zero emissions. This is a goal devoutly to be wished, but the closer we get to it— with automobiles or anything else—the more elusive it becomes.

The first 90 percent of the job of cleaning up any kind of pollution is relatively easy. The next five per cent is tough, but still possible. It's the last few percentage points where things begin to get sticky and where we have to start thinking about other priorities—the need to keep factories, mills, and mines operating, to keep people working, the urgent need to conserve energy and natural resources.

By all means, Congress should continue to sit on the auto companies until the 1978 statutory standards are achieved, or until it is proved conclusively that they are not feasible. It is clear that we would not have come as far as we have had it not been for the law's force-feeding of pollution-control technology.

Yet there is something Congress could do right now that would bring far greater and more immediate benefits for the public health: It could require that all states conduct periodic inspections of every vehicle on the road to insure that they are in compliance with the emission standards of their particular model year.

It is one thing to crank out cars meeting certain memission specifications on the assembly line. B ut if there is no follow-up, if nothing is done to see that people maintain their cars to these specifications, not a great deal has really been accomplished.

Inside Labor

By Victor Riesel

The British Monarchy:
Queen Elizabeth II
'Bastion Against Naked Power'

(SET ITAL) Lord Home, former British Prime Minister, is Victor Riesel's guest columnist today. Here he discusses the Queen's role in protecting British democracy and as a unifying influence in the Commonwealth. (END ITAL)

By Lord Home of the Hirsel
British Prime Minister, 1963-64

LONDON – Britain has a long experience of monarchy and, as the Silver Jubilee celebrations have proved, the institution is well founded on popular respect and affection for the present holder of the office -- Queen Elizabeth II.

There have, of course, been profound changes in the nature and style of the monarchy since the Stuarts tried to assert the doctrine of the Divine Right of Kings. The constitutional changes since the 17th century have always been concerned with limiting the power of the executive and asserting the control of the elected Parliament. The result has been that the ability of the Crown to dictate or to promote policies has been modified to a point where the monarch always acts on the advice of her ministers.

The Queen, under the constitution, still has the power to dismiss Parliament or to refuse its advice, but no monarch would in practice invoke such powers except under circumstances which are virtually unforeseeable.

Paradoxically, in this century, as the actual power of the Crown has declined its influence on public opinion has increased. The public has become concerned about some of the aspects of democracy, and in particular the ability of sectional groups to grasp power and to use it on occasions against the interest of the majority of the poeple.

For example, an overbearing attitude on the part of a large trade union could be as tyrannical as that of any of the earlier kings.

So the British people, who throughout history have been peculiarly sensitive to their democratic rights, approve of a monarch who is above politics and who could be their safeguard against a return in different guise of anked power.

The British public prefer the monarchy to a presidency for the reason that a president is in most cases a half-political animal. The strength of the Queen in comtemporary history is that she is above the party political battle.

There is a more personal reason for the increased prestige of the Crown. King George V and the present Queen's parents, King George VI and Queen Elizabeth, proved themselves to be exemplary public servants.

The Queen and her husband Prince Philip, Duke of Edinburgh, have carried on that tradition and adapted the monarchy to changing social conditions with sensitivity and skill. So both in a constitutional and in a personal sense the Crown has interpreted the mood of the day.

The facet of the British monarchy which others seem to find it difficult to understand is the role of the Queen as Head of the Commonwealth. On the face of it this is an anachronism, but in practice the relationship works and has its value in terms of Britain's international relations.

What is more, the 19th century interpretation of British colonialism was liberal in the sense that from the start training was given to the indigenous pecples of Africa, Asia and the West Indies in the arts of administration and government. Once that process started, ultimate independence for the territories was assured.

Certainly mistakes were made, but overall the transition from despotic Empire to a Commonwealth of free and equal partners was remarkably smooth and power was transferred with the minimum of friction and the maximum of goodwill.

In the evolution of the colonies there were certain features of constitutional and political development which tended to promote a common outlook and mutual interests. The concept of the separation of the roles of the political executive from the Courts of Justice, the rights of the individual under the law, the transition of the franchise to one man, one vote, were all aspects of the Westminster pattern of democracy and corresponded with the ambitions of people everywhere.

In the old Commonwealth these techniques were directly inherited and in the new Commonwealth they were adopted so that to some extent there was a family atmosphere among those concerned with working a common experiment in democracy.

The question was: could the royal link be retained in the new conditions? All the odds seemed to be against it, especially when India became a republic.

But the ties were strong enough to hold, and Mr. Nehru, then Prime Minister of India, felt that he was able to accept the British monarch's style and title of "The Queen -- Head of the Commonwealth."

This concept has proved a symbol of unity in a highly diversified association of nations. It is a typically British compromise which others find it difficult to comprehend and about the value of which they sometimes express considerable scepticism.

But in fact it has tangible values. There is a Commonwealth Parliamentary Association of which all the countries are members and which is universally popular with them.

There are regular meetings of all the prime ministers and finance ministers of the Commonwealth. They meet to review the relationship between the different partners and to survey world affairs. In these Commonwealth discussions and debates there is no veto. Decisions are by consensus.

In a world of division and danger there is value in such an association. One of the great assets to Britain is that after reigning for 25 years the Queen has an intimate knowledge of all the Commonwealth personalities, whom she has met as often in their own lands as she has at home.

So in this Jubilee year we in Britain count our blessings.

P.S. TO THE NEWS

JUDICIAL ACTIVISM
By PHYLLIS SCHLAFLY
Copley News Service

The seeds of judicial legislation sowed by Supreme Court Justices Hugo Black and William O. Douglas are now yielding weird fruit.

A federal judge recently held unconstitutional a New Jersey law requiring public school students to stand during the pledge of allegiance to the American flag. The judge did not justify this by a written opinion, but announced it orally.

In making this decision, the judge said he was extending the U.S. Supreme Court decision of 1943 which held that a student could not be compelled to recite the pledge of allegiance against his will.

The 1st Amendment right of free speech was the issue in that case.

But there was no free speech issue in the present case. The issues were class discipline, courtesy and respect for a patriotic exercise by others.

The 16-year-old girl who was the plantiff in this case, and whose picture in a low-cut semi-dress appeared with the article in The New York Times, accurately summed up the decision in her own words: "Everybody has the right now to do what they want. There's no mandatory sitting or standing -- you're free to do what you see fit."

And so it is. If a teacher can't tell the pupils when to stand up and when to sit down, no wonder there is no discipline in the schools today.

A school in which "everybody has the right to do what they want" is a school where everybody's rights are violated by those who lack self-discipline, courtesy and respect for the life, property and values of others.

In another recent example of judicial activism, a New York state Supreme Court judge issued an injunction that prohibits the U.S. Tennis Association and the Women's Tennis Association from excluding Richard Raskind from playing in the world's richest women's tennis tournament at Forest Hills.

Raskind, who now calls himself Renee Richards, says he is a woman. He had a sex change operation in 1975. However, Richards refuses to take the standard Barr body test which has been used since 1968 to determine whether athletes qualify for women's events in the Olympic Games.

The purpose of this test is to prevent the unfair competition that would result if men masquerading as women were permitted to enter the women's athletic events.

Richards is 6 feet 2 and obviously has a big advantageover the women tennis stars such as Tracy Austin who is only 5 feet tall.

When a male-female competition was staged last year by television promoters, tremendous handicaps had to be imposed on the men to make the game fair. The male players were allowed only one serve, required to hit in the singles court, and forbidden to rush the net. The female players were allowed two serves and permitted to hit in the alleys.

Apparently, the New York judge believes that he is better able to determine whether a person is really a man or a woman than the internationally accepted physical test, and that, based on his conclusion, he then has the right to tell privately financed athletic associations whom they must permit to compete.

When judges give speeches at public meetings, they often complain about their heavy work load, their backlog of cases and how their salaries have not kept pace with inflation. It usually takes years for any case to get to trial.

Part of the problem could be solved if the judges would refrain from assuming such tasks as deciding whether teachers may tell their pupils to stand up or sit down, and who must be allowed to compete in privately financed tennis tournaments.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

and Les Whitten

WASHINGTON — Senate Minority Leader Howard Baker, R-Tenn., rounded up enough fellow Republicans recently to block public financing of Senate elections. He also concocted a slick scheme to raise private funds for those same Republicans.

The able and agile Baker signed his name to a fund-raising letter which discussed the need for a strong national defense. The need for campaign funds was barely mentioned. The letter was mailed to about one million well heeled prospects.

A detailed questionnaire, identified as the "1977 National Defense Survey," was enclosed in the same envelope. "I've gone ahead and registered a special survey number in your name," explained Baker, "... so that the results can be tabulated accurately and quickly."

The Senate Republican leader continued urgently: "I personally believe this is NOT the time to gamble, in any way, with our national defenses ... But I want to know what you think. That's why I've sent you this specially numbered survey assigned for your personal use."

Oh yes, $300,000 had to be raised, Baker added, to fund two top priority projects: "(1) distribute nationally the 1977 SURVEY ON NATIONAL DEFENSE to thousands of Americans and (2) elect Republicans to the U.S. Senate who'll vote to keep our defense strong."

The questionnaires and the checks began rolling in this summer. The checks were processed by the Bank of Virginia, which carefully deposited the money and kept a list of contributors. But those top-priority questionnaires were dumped unceremoniously into the trash.

Sources at the bank told us that 20,000 to 30,000 questionnaires were discarded without bothering to tabulate the results. It looked suspiciously as if the defense survey were merely a gimmick to raise campaign funds, being that it's easier to extract money from the citizenry in the name of patriotism than politics.

Our reporter Vance Hawthorne confronted GOP officials with the allegations that, once the checks had been carefully removed from the envelopes, the urgent survey results were thrown in the trash. "Completely inaccurate," retorted the officials.

Our sources, nevertheless, stuck by their story. One furnished us with a sworn affidavit declaring: "I was assigned to the mailing services section of the Bank of Virginia where I was put to work ... processing mail for the Republican National Senatorial Committee. I was directed by my supervisor to throw away the surveys involved in the mailing."

Immediately after our inquiries, our sources reported, the check processors were issued new instructions to begin saving the questionnaires. We went back to the GOP. This time a spokesman acknowledged that 20,000 to 30,000 questionnaires had been discarded because of a "misunderstanding."

Three bank sources assured us, however, that there had been no misunderstanding. The bank had received explicit instructions, they insisted, to throw out the questionnaires.

Since the names and addresses had been filed, the Republicans have now followed up quietly with a new letter to those whose questionnaires were deposited in the trash. This letter is signed not by Baker but by Robert Moore, the executive director of the campaign committee.

"Unfortunately, due to a processing error," he explains, "the original survey assigned to your name was not tabulated. And that really concerns me."

Now, the survey results are being tabulated, albeit belatedly. So are the contributions, which have already reached about $250,000. The money is being distributed in $10,000 bundles to Republican senators who are running for re-election next year.

Social Security Mess: We receive dozens of letters and calls every day from citizens who complain that the Social Security system has short-changed them. The agency is so bound up in red tape and confusing regulations that the frustrated claimants are often cheated out of money owed to them by the government.

We receive far too many complaints for our small staff to investigate. The best we can do is to make random inquiries. We heard, for example, from Dorothy Lopez whose husband, Joe, had been injured on a construction job helping to save another man's life in a fall from an unsafe scaffold. Joe Lopez was so severely injured that he was forced to quit work.

In 1975, he applied for disability benefits from Social Security. He had a right to these benefits, which should have been granted without a hassle. Instead, he was denied benefits three times, then granted a measly $136 monthly allotment to maintain his family of three. Only $4.40 a month was allowed, for example, to raise his son.

Dorothy Lopez spent the next 18 months fighting Social Security officials for a just allotment. They gave her the runaround until she finally wrote to us in desperation. "No one seems to care," she wrote wearily. "It's all covered up."

We found that the Lopez family was entitled to three times what they had been paid. Embarrassed officials admitted that Dorothy had been right all along. Result: Their monthly check was increased to over $400.

But millions of other Americans are not so fortunate. Congressional sources say eligible persons often receive nothing, while those not entitled to payments find ways to squeeze money out of the cumbersome Social Security system.

Todays News In Brief

Eskimos face tougher winter

BARROW, Alaska (AP) — The Eskimos, who have survived 2,000 Arctic winters through subsistence hunting, could face tougher winters if a ban is upheld on killing the bowhead whale, which is on the endangered species lists. The International Whaling Commission, meeting in June in Australia, unanimously approved a ban on killing — including subsistence hunting — of the bowhead, a slow-moving mammal whose head is almost a third of its length.

Carter aid asked in Park case

WASHINGTON (AP) — Atty. Gen. Griffin Bell is asking President Carter to help return South Korean businessman Tongsun Park to the United States to face a trial in connection with alleged influencebuying in Congress. Bell, describing Park as "a fugitive from American justice", made his appeal to the President on Tuesday. "We're ready to go to trial immediately," said Bell of Park, who has been named in a 36-count felony indictment on charges of bribery and corruption.

Treaty to be signed tonight

WASHINGTON (AP) —After 13 years of negotiations, the United States and Panama will sign a treaty tonight that would would turn the waterway over to the Panamanians by the year 2000. But the treaty-signing ceremony doesn't guarantee that the negotiators' agreements will stand. The treaty must still be approved by the Senate and by the Panamanian voters in a plebescite.

Taiwan breakoff vow claimed

PEKING (AP) — Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-ping says President Ford promised to break diplomatic relations with Taiwan if he was elected, but the Carter administration offered only to reduce the American embassy there to a liaison mission in exchange for full ties with Peking. At a meeting Tuesday with 13 executives and directors of The Associated Press, Teng said efforts to normalize U.S.-Chinese relations suffered a setback during the visit of Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance.

Holiday toll climbs to 469

A total of 469 persons died in traffic accidents nationwide over the three-day Labor Day weekend.

The Labor Day count, which started at 6 p.m. Friday and ended at midnight Monday local time, was one less than the National Safety Council's estimate of between 470 and 570 deaths.

During a three-day non-holiday weekend in late summer, about 400 persons would die in traffic, the council said.

During the 1976 Labor Day holiday period, there were 501 traffic fatalities. The worst toll was in 1968 when 688 persons were killed.

Memphis to get Elvis statue

MEMPHIS, Tenf. (AP) — Plans have been announced to build a 25-foot bronze statue of Elvis Presley which will be given to the city by the Memphis Development Foundation.

Joe Pipkin, president of the Mid+South Fair Association, and real estate developer Dan Wilkinson said Tuesday the 50-ton statue would be financed with private funds and built on a site that has not been selected.

Donations will be accepted to finance the tribute to Presley, who died Aug. 16 at age 42.

Pennsylvania sculptor Eric Parks has been commissioned for the statue, which should be completed in about two years.

Carter pledges jobs priority

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter, after citing "horrible figures" on unemployment among young blacks, told the Congressional Black Caucus today he now is putting a higher priority on jobs programs.

Rep. Parren Mitchell, D+Md., the caucus chairman, told reporters after the session that Carter showed discernable movement toward support of a compromise Humphrey+Hawkins employment bill favored by the black legislators.

Mitchell said Carter promised to have key economic and labor advisers report to him within 10 days about prospects for fashioning a bill the administration could support. The present bill would set a goal of reducing unemployment, now listed at 7.1 per cent by the Labor Department, to 3 per cent within four years through a variety of federal programs to stimulate private hiring.

Kidnaper demands announced

COLOGNE, West Germany (AP) — The kidnapers of industrialist Hanns Martin Schleyer have demanded release of 11 jailed terrorists, $478,500 ransom and a flight out of the country for the freed prisoners, security officials said today.

But the deadlines set by the kidnapers "can no longer be met," Interior Minister Karl Schiess of Baden+Wuerttemberg state said.

Security sources said the kidnapers had warned that their demands must be met by this afternoon.

The officials said 100,000 marks — $43,500 — was demanded for each of the prisoners to be released.

He said the federal government would have to decide whether to free the prisoners. A cabinet meeting was under way in Bonn.

Legislative leaders hopeful

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Missouri's legislative leaders say they are hopeful a 10-member negotiating committee may soon be able to make some progress toward resolving the stalemate on the $140 million building bill.

The special legislative session called to work out the huge capital improvements bill has recessed, while the conference committee members continue to informally work out a version of the bill agreeable to both the House and Senate.

The senators approved a $145 million measure, while the House voted for a $142 million bill.

The matter was sent to the conference committee, but the lawmakers soon reached an impasse and the state legislators went home.

However, legislative leaders Tuesday said they were optimistic the informal discussion on the bill had paved the way for a breakthrough.

Rep. Wayne Goode, D+Normandy, and chairmman of the House Appropriations Committee said the conference committee might be able to meet "either this week or next week" to begin consideration of a final compromise.

CIRCUIT COURT

NEW MADRID — Twelve persons pleaded guilty to criminal charges Tuesday before Judge William L. Ragland on the opening day of the September Term of New Madrid County Circuit Court.

James Frank Muse of Portageville was granted probation with supervision when he pleaded guilty to possession of stolen property and was sentenced to a two-year term in custody of the Department of Corrections. Muse was accused of having in his possession on Feb. 23, one 1974 model pickup truck that belonged to Claude Knowles which Muse allegedly knew had been stolen.

Marvin Hufford of Gideon Route One and Delbert Lawrence of Tallapoosa both pleaded guilty to burglary and stealing charges stemming from a burglary on July 23 at a shed in Gideon and the theft of copper tubing and a gas stove. Both defendants were granted probation with supervision after receiving consecutive two-year sentences on each charge.

Thomas Lee Crook of Charleston Route Two was placed on probation withsupervision when he pleaded guilty and was sentenced to a two-year term on a felonious stealing charge. Crook was accused of stealing one coat, one pair of pants and a bed sheet from Graber's Dept. Store in Sikeston on Dec. 28, 1976.

Byron Pride of Portageville pleaded guilty to burglary and stealing charges and was placed on probation under supervision, after receiving consecutive two-year terms on each charge. He was accused of burglarizing Combs Daisy Queen in Portageville on May 8 and the theft of $125, and merchandise valued together at $200.

Probation under supervision was granted to George Stanley Harrington and Lindell Floyd Pind of Portageville who pleaded guilty to first degree burglary and stealing and were each sentenced to two-year terms on each charge to run concurrently. They were charged with burglarizing the home of Thomas Harrington on July 21, and the theft of one digital clock radio, two small speakers, jewelry and jewelry box, one 410-guage shotgun, one .22 caliber rifle and two BB guns.

Shed B. Wright of Howardville pleaded guilty to a charge of stealing less than $50 and was given a one-year suspended jail sentence upon payyment of costs and during good behavior. Wright had been charged along with three other defendants with burglarizing the Howardville School on June 25 and the theft of various school equipment.

Roy Marshall and James Vent pleaded guilty to stealing less than $50, reduced from robbery from a person, and were both given one-year jail sentences that were suspended upon payment of costs, during good behavior and restitution was ordered. The men were accused of taking approximately $8 from Joe Treadwell Jr. on May 2.

Milton Carter was given a one-year suspended jail sentence upon payment of costs and during good behavior after pleading guilty to child molestation of a 10-year old boy on June 12.

Allen Louis Howard, charged with exhibiting a dangerous and deadly shotgun in the presence of Deputy Sheriff Bud Ross on May 28 was sentenced to one year in jail, which was suspended upon payment of costs and during good behavior.

Theodore Roosevelt and Franklin D. Roosevelt, 26th and 32nd presidents of the United States respectively, were cousins. An ancestor of both men, Claes Martenszan van Rosenvelt, came to New Amsterdam from Holland about 1650, The World Almanac notes. Claes' son Nicholas, a New York alderman in 1700 and 1715, had a son Johannes, from whom Theodore Roosevelt was descended, and a son Jacobus, from whom F.D.R. was descended.

Cooking Up With Cherie

By Cherie Blanton

Butterfly Lamb

Have the butcher bone and butterfly the leg of lamb. Rub the seasonings into the meat and rub in the oil. Let the roast marinate at least one hour before broiling. Put it 8 inches from the heat for 40 minutes, fat side up; turn and cook for 10 minutes.

Seasonings

4-6 pound leg of lamb
½ tsp. each of oregano, beau monde, fine herbs season-all, chopped parsley, broken bay leaf
¼ tsp. each of lemon peel, garlic powder
¼ cup of olive oil

Scalloped Asparagus with Artichokes

1-14 oz. can cut green asparagus, drained
1-14 oz. can artichoke hearts, drain but save juice
2-4 oz. can mushrooms, drained
4 heaping TBS butter
4 heaping TBS flour
2 cups milk
½ cup artichoke juice
1 tsp. seasoning salt
salt and pepper to taste
¼ pound grated cheese

Place vegetables (halve artichokes) in layers in a casserole. Melt butter, blend in flour, slowly add milk and juice, stir to make a heavy cream sauce. Add seasonings and half of the cheese to the sauce. Pour over vegetables. Top with rest of cheese and bake 25 minutes at 350 degrees.

Fruited Cream Salad

1 pkg. orange jello — 1 pt. vanilla ice cream
1 small jar marschino cherries, drained and cut
1 large can drained crushed pineapple
1 cup boiling water
1 cup chopped pecans

Dissolve jello in boiling water. Add ice cream and stir till melted. Add fruit and refrigerate.

Savory Casserole Bread

2-thirds cup chopped green onion with tops
3 TBS salad oil
1 cup chopped cooked ham or corned beef
2 eggs, slightly beaten
½ tsp. prepared mustard
2 TBS sesame seeds
2 eggs
2 cups biscuit mix
2 cups milk
1½ cups grated sharp cheddar
3 TBS melted butter

Saute onion in 1 TBS oil for 2 minutes. Combine ham and biscuit mix. Mix oil, eggs, milk, onions, and half the cheese. Add to ham and mix. Spread in a greased round 10 inch metal pan or iron skillet. Sprinkle with rest of cheese and seeds. Pour butter over top. Bake at 375 degrees for 35 to 40 minutes.

Now, fix your favorite dessert and call the neighbors in.

Weddings to come

O'Neal-Wisdom

Tammy O'Neal and Gregory Edward Wisdom

Mrs. Nancy O'Neal of Sikeston and Jim O'Neal of Morley announce the engagement of their daughter Tammy to Gregory Edward Wisdom. Wisdom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Clyde "Peck" Wisdom of Sikeston.

Tammy is a 1977 graduate of Sikeston High School where she participated in Red Peppers, choir and DECA.

Wisdom is a 1977 graduate of Sikeston High School and was a member of VICA and DECA.

The couple plans a December 2 wedding.

Hunter-Fick

NEW MADRID -- Mr. and Mrs. Samuel L. Hunter Jr. announce the engagement of their daughter, Linda Leah to Robert C. Fick. Fick is the son of Mrs. Cletus F. Fick and the late Mr. Fick of St. Louis.

Miss Hunter is a graduate of Gwynedd-Mercy College with an A.D. in nursing. She is presently employed at the University of Missouri Medical Center at Columbia as a diabetes nurse practitioner.

Fick is a graduate of the University of Missouri at Rolla where he received a bachelor of science degree in mechanical engineering and was associated with AT&T for three years before entering law school. He received his Juris Doctorate from the University of Missouri at Columbia and is currently employed as the city attorney of Cape Girardeau.

A late October wedding is planned.

Getting married?

The Daily Standard, 205 S. New Madrid St., now has new wedding forms available at the front office or at the women's desk. Business hours are from 7 a.m., to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday. Forms will be mailed if a self-addressed, stamped envelope is provided.

The deadline for weddings is three weeks after date of wedding. Pictures will be returned if a self-addressed, stamped envelope large enough to hold a picture is supplied. Color pictures are discouraged. There is no charge for running a wedding

Dear Ann Landers

Reader hates short-lived nylons

Dear Ann Landers: Since your column is the world's bulletin board for gripes, both petty and grand, may I have my say?

What man would tolerate socks that had to be replaced every week or ten days? You would think an industry that can produce fabrics and fibres for the moon could come up with a no-run stocking for women.

We like nylons, We feel undressed without them. But as long as women keep buying this inferior product the manufacturers will think it's what we want. Well, it's NOT what we want. We want some wear for our money.

Where does one start? Ann Landers? Ralph Nader? The Better Business Bureau? Perhaps since nylon is a petroleum byproduct and tons of it go into weekly trash cans across America, we should write to our Congressmen. Or do we ask the Japanese to come up with something better? -- Irked

Dear Irked: Haven't you heard of "planned obsolescence"? It's the simple technique of putting things together so they will fall apart and have to be replaced.

I assure you American fabric companies already know how to make run-resistant nylons for women, but why kill the goose that lays all those golden eggs?

Are you willing to go barelegged as a protest? I'm not. So stuck is stuck -- and that's what we are.

Dear Ann Landers: Next year our parents will celebrate their 50th wedding anniversary. They are very big on outward appearances -- highly social. The world thinks they are so charming and refined. But the truth is they are a pair of House Devils. The never-ending carping at each other kept our family in constant turmoil. My sister and I left home as soon as it was legal to do so. Whenever we go to see our parents we can count on a ruined day. The fighting is incessant. The demands they make on each other, and on us, are terrible.

Now they are beginning to talk about the upcoming anniversary. They want a huge party. My sister and I don't see how we could give a party to celebrate such a phony relationship. May we hear from you? -- Big Brother

Dear Brother: What do you want to hear from me? If you and your sister don't want to give your parents a party for their 50th wedding anniversary -- don't do it. I suspect you have some guilt over this -- and that's the problem that needs to be resolved.

Dear Ann: A recent letter sounds like my mother wrote it. It contained her favorite word three times. "Prestige."

She is always on my back because my friends have no "prestige." Dad's associates have no "prestige." Even our parish priest doesn't have it.

Mom knows Dad has a lady on the side. We guessed it because Mom and Dad have had separate bedrooms for two years. Mom thinks this is "prestige."

Their marriage is a farce but they stay together "for us kids." We wish they'd split. What can we do? (P.S. What does prestige mean anyway?) -- Us'uns

Dear Us: You can do nothing. It's between the two principals.

Prestige means "one's standing in the eyes of other people -- reputation." Buy Mom a dictionary for Christmas or her birthday -- whichever comes first.

Don't get burned by a "line" that's too hot to handle. Play it cool with Ann Landers' guide to "necking and Petting -- What Are the Limits?" Send your request to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Ill. 60611, enclosing 50 cents in coin and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope.

You can cut down on foam when you are cooking dry beans or peas by adding a tablespoon of fat (for each cup of the legumes) to the cooking water. This method is particularly helpful when a pressure cooker is used. Great Northern, red kidney and pinto beans all benefit from this method; however, it does not help to keep large limas from foaming.

When a recipe calls for 1-3rd cup of crisply cooked crumbled bacon, cooking 4 slices of the bacon usually gives the amount needed.

Cooking school is for everyone

They come by the dozens, socres, hundreds. They are brides who are just beginning to cook. They are homemakers who have had a reputation for fine cooking for decades. They are men who are discovering the relaxation and fun of puttering with pots and pans.

Why do they come? "Because it's such a great evening," some say. "Because I learn so much... new ways of doing things..short cuts," say other. "Because I get ideas for menus that are out of the ordinary." "Because this school snaps me out of the old rut when I can't think of any thing different to cook," says a seasoned homemaker. "Because I get such different to cook," says a seasoned homemaker. "Because I get such wonderful ideas for entertaining" says a hostess. And some come mainly to have a chance to win one of the many valuable door prizes.

They are talking about the Progressive Farmer's kitchens cooking School which will be held September 8 7:30 p.m. Sikeston Fieldhouse. Tickets are free while they last at local stores displaying the cooking school posters. But it is important to have tickets in advance and for ticket holders to come early as the doors will be opened to fill the seats with non-ticket holders ten minutes before show time. Judging from past experience, dont' expect empty seats. We want you to come -- but come early. Auditoriums nearly always fill to standing room only.

This year the SOUTHERN KITCHENS Cooking program will feature everything from quick-AS-A-SNAP MICROWAVE COOKERY AND TIPS ON THE Chinese wok to old favorites such as pumpkin bread -- made a very new way. There will be lots of tips on short cuts and budget helpers. New twists on old favorites. Party ideas, dinner and supper menus to take the problems out of planning.

When Phyliss Young is on stage there is never a dull moment. Backed by her Program Co-Ordinator Beth Hawes the art of cooking is fast paced and fun.

Because of the demand for tickets it is imperative to pick them up from local merchants as early as possible. That not only ensures admission but a possibility of winning one of the valuale prizes.

Higher prices at markets prompts usage of more flour

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

The high prices of 1973 and 1974 which prompted people to cut down the use of convenience foods have left a legacy in the form of continued interest in baked goods and other "do-it-from-scratch" types of food.

Government statistics show that per capita consumption of wheat flour in the United States declined steadily from 118 pounds in 1960 to 106 pounds in 1974. The trend was reversed in 1975, however, and estimated per capita consumption of wheat flour for 1976 was 111 pounds.

Not all of the increase, of course, is due to more home-baked cakes and breads. A spokesman for the Wheat Flour Institute pointed out that Americans are eating more and more hamburgers every year. More hamburgers means more buns. And more buns means more wheat flour.

It is too soon to tell what the picture for 1977 will show. But some industry sources predict steady interest in home baking and consumers will find that they can save money and time if they learn what types of flours are available and which ones do what.

There are three parts to a kernel of wheat. The inner part, or endosperm, is the part which is ground to make white flour which accounts for more than 90 per cent of the flour milled in the United States.

The other two parts are the bran or outer layer and the germ — the part which would sprout. The bran and the germ are removed from white flour, but are left in whole wheat flour.

Revival planned

CONRAN -- The Trailway Sisters of Sarasota Florida will be holding a revival from Sunday Sept. 11 to Sunday Sept. 18 at the Full Gospel Meeting House. The revivals will run 7:30 p.m. nightly.

The sisters, Hope, 24, and Lisa, 18, Thornton have been traveling in the United States for the past 8 years.

The public is invited.

POLLY'S POINTERS

Store fur coat in sheet

DEAR POLLY — My two daughters and I all bought fake fur coats last winter but we were not given any instructions concerning their care over the summer. Someone advised us not to put plastic garment bags over the coats so I hope you or some reader who has such a coat can give us some advice. — AGNES.

DEAR AGNES — When making inquiries for you I found conflicting opinions concerning the plastic garment bags but it was suggested that you cover such a coat with a sheet. The main thing is to have such a coat cleaned so there is no danger of moths getting to work on them. — POLLY.

Jazz violin stylist still going at 79

SEATTLE (AP) — Joe Venuti is 79 years old, 35 years into developing a personal style of playing jazz on the violin.

He still makes the rounds of jazz festivals and night clubs across the country. He's still performing, still learning.

"You can't stop. You can't slow down," he said in a interview. "You've got to keep going.

"A guy retires, he's 65, you don't have a vocation ... if you're inventive, that's the whole deal," he said. "Just working — that's my favorite thing."

In a recent two-week appearance here, he played three vigorous sets a night, displaying every kind of bowing technique imaginable on tunes ranging from "Take the A-Train" to "Honeysuckle Rose" to "Rhapsody in Blue" to "Body and Soul."

One set opened with a belly dancer named Zephara. He responded by working into his improvisation a few of the violin passages in Rimsky-Korsakov's symphonic work, "Scheherazade".

For a country-flavored rendition of "Honeysuckle Rose", he was joined by "my protege," violinist John Phillips of Bellingham.

Oblivious to bar noise, he consistently produced the clear tone, sharp pizzicato and smooth bowing that reflect his classical training.

Venuti, a native of Lecco, Italy, says he began violin lessons at the Milan Conservatory when he was 4 years old.

At 12, he moved to the United States, joining his mother and sister in New Orleans. He said the first time he heard jazz, "it was just like country music to me."

He remained a classical musician, joining the Philadelphia Symphony and later the Detroit Symphony. But in 1922, he began four years playing "on and off" with the Goldkette Band in Detroit.

That was the turning point. "Jazz Encyclopedia" author Leonard Feather calls Venuti "the first great jazz violinist of the 1920s."

"I made more money playing jazz," says Venuti.

He worked nine years with Paul Whiteman's orchestra, formed his own band, played for 12 years with Bing Crosby and made the rounds of cocktail lounges in the West for a number of years.

In the late 1960s he began getting wider recognition with performances at major jazz festivals, and in 1975 he was named to the Newport Hall of Fame at the Newport Jazz Festival in New York.

From his first days as a student in Milan, he said, he played the same Santo Serafin violin until it was stolen from a Syracuse, N.Y., hotel two years ago. Now he uses his son's 1734 Imbeci.

Nobel Prize nomination elates Lewis

KENOSHA, Wis. (AP) — "I'm very proud," said comedian Jerry Lewis upon learning that he has been nominated for the Nobel Peace Prize by Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis.

"Whether you win or lose, just to be in that company is magnificent," the entertainer said by telephone from Las Vegas, where he is appearing at the Hotel Sahara.

Aspin, who described Lewis as "a man for all seasons, all people and all times" whose name "has, in the hearts of millions, become synonymous with peace, love and brotherhood" said he nominated Lewis at the request of Kenneth Mills of Kenosha.

Mills, assistant director of instruction at Gateway Technical Institute, cited Lewis' work in raising over $95 million in annual telethons over the past 11 years for muscular dystrophy as one of the reasons for the nomination.

Casino projects hit Reno

RENO, Nev. (AP) — The skyline of this once sleepy city in northern Nevada most well known for divorce has the look of big money these days.

Looming just east of downtown is the MGM Grand Hotel Casino — the world's biggest casino — scheduled for opening next year. It's costing about $114 million and investors expect a quick return.

In addition, seven other hotel-casino projects are under way in the "Biggest Little City in the World."

The reason for the boom? It's gambling, Nevada's biggest business. As one gaming official put it, "They aren't building all those new casinos because gambling is a losing operation."

But with development has come concern the area can't handle the rapid growth, can't supply water and necessary services — and isn't emotionally ready for the boom.

"Now it's growin' so fast here that ordinary working people who'll get these new jobs being created won't be able to afford a house," said Barbara Bennett, who ran unsuccessfully for the City Council as an opponent of the building boom.

Nevertheless, hammerhead cranes and the steel skeletons of highrise buildings mark the downtown area. Besides the MGM, Del Webb's Primadonna is being joined by the $37 million Sahara Reno, in Sparks, John Ascuaga's Nugget is working on a sizable expansion, and so is Harrah's in downtown Reno.

City officials say much of the construction money is coming from Reno and its banks. Investors have known for years that solid gaming operations in central Reno are money-makers. Harrah's, for example, announced recently its earnings for the 1976-77 fiscal year were $4 million more than the year before.

Those who want to see Reno stay the way it was, with guest ranches and lots of room on the meandering Truckee River, say development is causing a growth pattern the area can't handle.

With completion of the work will come an estimated 10,000 jobs, officials estimate, and experts predict those people could require 40,000 more service-related jobs in the future. Reno's population today is about 170,000, and forecasts indicate another 30,000 residents by 1980.

For a while this year, building in the Truckee Meadows residential area was halted by city councils in Reno and neighboring Sparks. Both held there wasn't enough capacity in the cities' joint sewer plant to accommodate new customers.

Businessmen, builders and unions were up in arms. Before the move, residents of both cities voted down a $7 million bond issue to double the size of the sewer plant. The issue came up again after the building moratorium and passed.

Cooking on the Trail

So you're going to rough it this vacation and do your cooking over an open fire? Well, don't forget the can opener — and don't forget the Bisquick® baking mix! That handy metal opener is top priority equipment. Your "open sesame" to a welcome feast of chili or baked beans after a long day on the trail. (To heat canned foods, be sure to remove labels and cut lids almost all the way around.) And with Bisquick baking mix in your knapsack, think! — flapjacks under the sky, maybe even made with wild blueberries. OR fluffy, bubbling dumplings in a stew. OR wrap-around dough for pigs in a blanket. For more tantalizing thoughts for cooking in the out-of-doors, read on.

BISCUITS IN A SKILLET

1/4 cup butter or margarine
Onion salt
Garlic salt
Paprika
2 cups Bisquick baking mix
1/2 cup cold water

Heat butter in 9- or 10-inch skillet until melted. Sprinkle with onion salt, garlic salt and paprika. Mix baking mix and cold water until soft dough forms; beat vigorously 20 strokes. Gently smooth dough into ball on floured cloth-covered board. Knead 5 times. Roll 1/2 inch thick. Cut with floured 2-inch cutter. Dip biscuits in skillet to coat with butter. Arrange in skillet; cover with heavy-duty aluminum foil, tucking ends underneath. Cook over grill until done, about 15 minutes. Invert to serve so crisp, browned side is up.

Serve 'em hot with Pocket Stew — the camp cook's delight because it's an outdoor meal in a dish complete with its foil server.

POCKET STEW

Make 4 hamburger patties from 1 pound ground beef. Place each patty on 12-inch square of double thickness heavy-duty aluminum foil. Top each with a slice of onion and slice of raw potato. Add two carrot strips. Sprinkle with 1 teaspoon salt and 1/8 teaspoon pepper. Seal foil securely. Place on hot coals, turning twice during cooking, until done, about 25 minutes. 4 servings.

Fisherman in the crowd? Turn a big day's catch into a fisherman's feast. Coat all sides of fresh fish with Bisquick baking mix. Dip in milk; roll again in baking mix. Cook in small amount of fat until brown.

Understanding Cholesterol

Q. A friend told me to stop worrying about cholesterol since my body manufactures it all the time. If this is true, why does it matter how much I eat?

A. We get cholesterol in many animal foods and since our bodies can manufacture it, there is little danger of not having enough.

Generally, the body regulates cholesterol well. If we eat less, the body supplies the missing amounts. If we eat more, the body makes less. Extra cholesterol is destroyed and excreted.

But the bodies of many people cannot cope with a lot of cholesterol-rich foods, particularly if these are in an average American diet which is rich in saturated fat. (For this reason, doctors often suggest restricting fatty meats, butter, cheese and rich baked goods, and recommend using polyunsaturated fats such as Mazola corn oil and margarine.)

When the cholesterol-regulating mechanism is faulty, the level of cholesterol in the blood can go up. This often leads to deposits of cholesterol in the artery walls, and increases the risk of heart attack.

As a rule, reducing the intake of cholesterol tends to lower blood cholesterol levels. But each individual is different. A few people have a high blood cholesterol level even on a restricted diet. In others, the level is normal in spite of what they eat. Women of child-bearing age are likely to have lower cholesterol levels than do men.

But for most Americans, nutritionists and heart specialists suggest limiting cholesterol intake to no more than 300 mg. per day. Remember this: no food of vegetable origin contains cholesterol. It is not found in fruits or vegetables including potatoes, grains, cereals, nuts or peanut butter. Other low-cholesterol foods are margarines, salad and cooking oils, plain breads, gelatin, egg white, fruit ices and hard candy.

Some foods high in cholesterol are also high in saturated fat: cheese, meat and milk. Some high-cholesterol foods have very little fat — such as shrimp. Highest in cholesterol are the key organs of the animal. Liver, for instance, is much higher in cholesterol than steak. Here is a list to help guide your eating:

Over 200 mg. cholesterol: 3-1/2 oz. liver, sweetbreads or brains; 1 egg or 1 egg yolk.

50 to 100 mg.: 3-1/2 oz. lean beef, pork, ham, lamb, veal, poultry, fish or most shellfish; 1 oz shrimp; 1 piece custard pie, cakes or pastries rich in egg yolk.

10 to 50 mg.: 2 tsp. butter, 1 tbsp. light cream, 1/2 cup vanilla ice cream, 1 cup ice milk or yogurt, 2 slices crisp bacon, 1 frankfurter, 3/4 cup cream soup, 1 serving plain cake or fruit pie, 2 cookies, 1 muffin.

For a diet designed to help lower blood cholesterol levels, write for a free copy of "A Diet for Today", Dept. DTUN, Box 307, Coventry, CT 06238.

Curits, Marinaro are cut victims

Linebacker Mike Curtis and running back Ed Marinaro were the best-known victims as National Football League teams cut their rosters to 48 players Tuesday.

Curtis was waived by the Seattle Seahawks and Marinaro, a former NCAA rushing champion, was cut by the New York Jets. For Curtis, a 34-year-old veteran of 13 pro seasons, it may be the end of the line. For Marinaro, it is the end of an unhappy experience.

"I can't help but feel a little bitter," Marinaro said after being cut by the Jets, with whom he signed as a free agent in 1976. "I left a championship team in Minnesota to play in New York and I played well when I got the chance. But, when they feel you're not helping, you're expendable. The past performances don't matter."

Marinaro's best NFL season was 1975 with the Vikings, when he caught 54 passes for 462 yards and rushed for 358. With the Jets, Marinaro played just six games before being sidelined with a foot injury. He rushed for 312 yards in 77 carries and caught 21 passes for 168 yards.

Curtis, a mainstay of the great Baltimore defense of the late 1960s and a former All-Pro, was obtained in the expansion draft by Seattle last year. He started at outside linebacker in every Seattle game last season.

As a middle linebacker for Baltimore, Curtis gained a reputation for aggressive play. He once used a forearm smash to deck a fan who ran onto the field during a Colts' game.

Also cut as NFL teams entered the final week of the preseason was quarterback Gary Marangi of Buffalo, who started the Bills' last seven games last season, all losses. Marangi had been traded to Green Bay last week but failed the Packers' physical and the deal was nullified.

Brock's three hits, two steals help Birds win

CHICAGO (AP) — Lou Brock considers himself a "professional technician" and doing his thing against the Chicago Cubs—the team which years ago dealt him away to the St. Louis Cardinals—doesn't give him any extra thrills.

"Let's put that to rest forever," said Brock in reference to the Cubs. Nevertheless, Brock helped do in his former club 3-1 Tuesday with three hits and two stolen bases while Ted Simmons drove in two runs with a homer and a single.

Brock last week cracked Ty Cobb's career record of 892 stolen bases and the two he nailed against the Cubs Tuesday extended his mark to 896, giving him 31 for the present season.

The 38-year-old Brock said, "It wouldn't be realistic" to think he might steal 1,000 bases, but he still has a goal in baseball and that is to reach 3,000 hits.

His two singles and a double gave him a career total of 2,810 hits and 109 for the present season. Brock wants 3,000 hits badly, but isn't sure he can do it by playing only one more full year. "If I close hot this year and get maybe 40 more hits, then I'd only need 150 next year," aid Brock.

"That might be possible. But if I need more than that, then I might have to play longer. But I'll only play as long as I can contribute to the club."

Pitcher Tom Underwood and Simmons also contributed to the St. Louis cause. Underwood, 8-10, hurled his first complete game of the season by setting the Cubs down on six hits.

Underwood and Simmons have varying feelings about playing in Wrigley Field. "I love it," said Simmons. "I hate it," said Underwood, who almost came to the Cubs before Philadelphia dealt him to St. Louis for outfielder Bake McBride.

"Yes, I know all about it, and I'm glad the deal wasn't made," said Underwood. "I like the Cubs and would fit into their plans, but I don't like pitching in this park. I'm lucky that the two times I've pitched hre, the wind has been blowing in."

Simmons likes playing in Wrigley field so much that if he had a steady diet of it he could wind up being the only major league catcher to win a batting title aside from Ernie Lombardi, who did it for Cincinnati in 1938 and the old Boston Braves in 1942.

"I'm a native of Michigan, and Chicago is the only place where we play that has Michigan summers," said Simmons. "There are some clubs I hit well against and the Cubs are one of them. Also, I just like hitting in this park."

Simmons raised his average to .332 to put him in third place in the National League batting race, four percentage points behind Rennie Stennett of Pittsburgh, who is out for the season, and 18 behind Dave Parker of Pittsburgh.

The Cardinals moved to Pittsburgh today for the start of a two-game series.

Jr. Babe Ruth awards made at banquet

Approximately 230 supporters of the Junior Babe Ruth program were on hand last night for the annual awards banquet. The dinner was held in the Senior High Cafetorium with Commissioner Jim Green and assistant Roger Sherman presiding.

The 14-15 year-old All-Stars were recognized for their second-place in the state championships. (The winner was Jefferson City, who advanced as far as the quarterfinals of the World Series.) The 13 year-olds were also singled out for their outstanding play in winning the regional crown.

Special citations were given to the sponsors, Glenda Wasson for her work in concessions, the scorekeepers, Missy Green and Larry Lasater, Eddy Wasson, groundskeeper; and Rita Lasater for her work in keeping the financial integrity of the league together. The staff of the Daily Standard was even recognized for its coverage of the long season.

Joe Uhls, long-time baseball coach of the Southeast Missouri Indians was on hand in the roll of a guest speaker.

Palsy slow pitch tourney is scheduled

CHAFFEE – The Chaffee Jaycees will sponsor their Second Annual Cerebral Palsy Softball Tournament beginning Sept. 17 at Harmon Field in Chaffee. All proceeds from the tournament and concessions will be given to the KFVS Cerebral Palsy Telethon. A goal of $1,000 is hoped to be raised.

Drawings for the slow pitch tournament will be held at 8:00 p.m. Sept. 14 at Big E Tavern in Chaffee. Interested teams should call Paul Friea at 887-6139 or Richard Hodge at 887-3177. Entry fee will be a $35 donation.

Route to Aquinas game announced

Sikeston High School officials said Tuesday that spectators from here wishing to attend the football game between the Bulldogs and St. Thomas Aquinas at Florissant can expect about a three hour drive Friday evening.

Athletic Director Steve Borgsmiller announced directions to the Aquinas playing field at Ferguson Junior High to assist fans who want to back the Bulldogs.

Motorists should take Interstate 55 North and exit at I-270, south of St. Louis. They should proceed west on I-270, which circles the city, and take the Florissant Road exit to the right. Proceed one block to January Avenue and take another right. Ferguson Junior High School will be on the right side of the highway, beside January Park, which is on the corner of Florissant Road and January Avenue.

Principal Robert Buchanan said that two student busses are already scheduled for the trip to St. Louis County, and added that numerous adults have inquired about directions to the game, giving hope of a good Sikeston rooting section.

Donipahn banking on 13 seniors for improvement

By DALE FORBIS
Daily Standard

DONIPHAN -- Doniphan coach Ed Rickus says you can't really call 1977 a rebuilding year for his Dons, even though his team returns only three starters from last season's 2-8 squad.

"You can't really call this a rebuilding year because we will lose so many players before next year."

Converted fullback David Gettings may carry a big part of the Doniphan offensive success on his legs. The 230-pounder played tackle last year, but has the speed to run at fullback if, according to the coach, "he can hang onto the ball."

"If he (Gettings) doesn't fumble, he can help us running play. Otherwise, he should be a good blocker since he was a tackle."

Halfback Bruce Hunt and tackle Mark Rodgers are the other returning Dons. Brian Ball, a 160-pound back, started parttime as a junior. Rodgers, a 215 pounds, must bolster a green defense.

Doniphan starts against Caruthersville this Friday.

"I don't even have the faintest idea what he (CHS coach LLoyd Block) will have down there."

Considering the season, Rickus says, "If we could win against Caruthersville, we could be tough."

Ricky York, a 150-pound end-back, offers the team speed and a breakaway threat at all times. York has scooted through a 220-yard dash in a best time of 22.1 seconds. Leonard Hopkins is another senior who will be hindered by lack of experience, but offers a good deal of speed to the Dons in their quest to advance past last year's sixth-place finish.

"We've got some young boys, sophomores, who may move in a guard and tackle as the year goes on," Rickus points out. "Other than that, we'll double (go both ways) all the way down the lineup."

Junior quarterback Rusty Rawlings will lead the offense, operating out of a double-split or slot offensive set.

"We think he'll (Rawlings) develop into a good passer.

Evaluating the conference situation, Rickus thinks Portageville will have as good a shot at the title as Illmo-Scott City, but the coach, who enters his second year at Doniphan, admits the Rams will be "right in there."

Jackson brain bank

Leading the Jackson Indians into battle for the 1977 Northern Division crown will be: Tim Sutton, assistant; Paul Webber, head coach; Terry Moore, assistant; and Bob Sink, assistant. The Indians will open their season against Fredericktown this Friday night.

By MIKE MARSH
Daily Standard
Sportswriter

JACKSON – Under Coach Paul Webber, Jackson has been known for its wishbone offense and rugged defense. (They surrendered only 53 points in ten outings last year.) If you expect to see a change from the Indians, don't hold your breath.

"It's going to be difficult to replace some of the people we lost on defense," proclaimed a solemn Coach Webber. Losing All-Conference performers such as Jim Thompson, Rich Weith, (also All-District) and Kelly Green from your secondary along with All-State linebacker Mike Gohn would seem like a devasting blow. However, followers of the Indians know that someone well-trained and capable will probably be taking their place. Even the loss of Gohn may be softened by the expected performance of Mark Collier, a hard-hitting starter from the '76 squad.

Not all is lost for the Indians, who will have some excellent young players returning from last year's 6-4 season. Quarterback Sam Birk and tackle Bob Uren were both second team all-conference and will return to do battle in the Northern Division. Doug Goodson, Blaine Adams, and Curt Davidson are two-year lettermen who will also return to the offensive and defensive lines.

Along with Birk in the backfield, Jimmy Williams and Kevin Rampley will also have some play under their belt. Both were used last year in the wishbone and Rampley was in the top twenty rushers with 391 yards. (Along with his state championship in wrestling.)

The blending of experience with the tradition of Jackson make them a formidable opponent, as usual. Coach Webber's squad was idle last Friday and he still has some reservations about how his youngsters will perform "under battle conditions." To summarize his team, Webber stated that, "We don't have a super-star. We feel we have a sound team." And the offense? "Williams and Rampley are not blessed with outstanding speed, but will give us good balance. No one will be able to key on one individual and stop our attack."

In regards to the race for Northern supremacy, Webber feels it will be "very interesting. Poplar Bluff, Perryville, and Dexter are right up there. Of course Sikeston and Jackson will also be tough."

And in case anyone is feeling the least bit sorry for the loss of many quality players from last year's team. Webber said, "We believe we're going to be very competitive, especially if we can keep our people healthy. It's going to take a good team to beat us."

Hard work helps KC pinch swingers

A more disparate trio might be hard to find, but LaCock, Wathan and Zdeb are three unsung reasons why the Kansas City Royals have rushed to the head of the American League West class.

"Just a lot of hard work," says Charlie Lau, the Royals' hitting coach. "Most of these guys are fringe players with not all the ability in the world. But somewhere along the line they've realized the secret of making it in the big leagues."

LaCock, Wathan and Zdeb are the cream of a pinch hitting corps that may well be the most consistent in either league this season.

The Royals, whose pinch hitters checked in with an anemic .200 showing in 1976, are now racing along at a .304 pace. That's the second-best showing in the AL and their 30 runs batted in are tops.

"We've really got a lot of pride. We work pretty hard and everybody's got a job to do," said LaCock, who owns a .364 pinch-hitting mark with three RBIs.

Wathan is batting .375 in substitute plate appearances with five RBIs, while Zdeb stands at .357 and six. Zdeb, a rookie, also has three of the team's eight game-winning pinch hits, including a home run.

Herzog is quick to admit the Royals have a more versatile bench this season. LaCock, Joe Lahoud and Tom Poquette give Kansas City left-handed punch, while Cookie Rojas joins Wathan and Zdeb to provide balance from the right side.

"Pinch hitting is funny. Early this season we just didn't get the job done and everyone said we had no bench," Herzog commented. "You just gotta get the guys up there you think hit the pitcher the best."

Herzog believes that giving his backup players some occasional starts makes them more effective when a pinch hitter is needed.

"It seemed like when I was playing and I got up two or three times a week, I could always pinch hit," he said. "But I only got in five games my last year in Detroit and I couldn't do thing."

Wathan, a second-year catcher, says a certain temperament is needed to be a successful pinch hitter. A player has to be aggressive at the plate, yet patient in waiting for his turn.

"I feel pretty relaxed up there, and just swing the best I can," Wathan shrugged.

"There's no use crying about it. I look at it this way. Not much is expected of me. If I get a hit, it's a big bonus. If not, that's it. There's no use putting more pressure on yourself."

All three of the Royals' bench stars hope their exploits lead to more steady jobs — but nobody is complaining right now.

"I like to do anything in the big leagues," said Zdeb, a 24-year-old outfielder. "It's good experience to come right in to a contending club and a pennant race."

USC more prepare, says Coach Robinson

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The experiments, the inexperience and the jitters are behind Coach John Robinson and his Southern California football team, he says.

And he hopes that means his second season debut won't be a repeat of last year's — a 46-25 beating by Missouri.

The Trojans travel to Columbia, Mo., Saturday and Robinson told reporters at his weekly breakfast meeting Tuesday that he's ready.

"I hope I'm a better coach this year," he said. "I assume that. Our staff has been together for a year now. We have the feel of working together better. We were experimenting a lot last year. But also we were scared to death, being new, so you work like hell to make sure everything's right.

"A year ago, we were playing with a new passing attack system that developed dramatically during the year. We are further along now with the quarterbacks and receivers because they have been here a year now."

But while a victory Saturday would be nice, a look at last year's records shows that the first game isn't everything. USC lost no more games after Missouri, winning the Pacific-8 title, the Rose Bowl and a No. 2 national ranking. The Tigers were 6-5.

"It's important we don't focus on one game," Robinson cautioned. "It will hurt us some for this game. We have not been a great team to start a season. I read where we have lost three of the last six openers."

Looking at his opponents, Robinson said Missouri has two good receivers in Joe Stewart and Leo Lewis and is one of the best teams at running the option.

FOREST HILLS, N.Y. (AP) — A computer, in its infinite wisdom, spewed out the seedings at the U.S. Open Tennis Tournament, predicting that top-seeded Bjorn Borg of Sweden would meet No. 2 Jimmy Connors in the finals, a rematch of their grand, five-set thriller at Wimbledon earlier this summer.

The computer didn't know about the pectoral muscle. It didn't know about pain. So it certainly didn't expect Borg, the Wimbledon champ, to be sitting on his stool when the bell rang for the second game of his third set with Dick Stockton of Dallas on Tuesday.

And the computer never will understand that only the severest kind of pain to his injured muscle could make the 21-year-old Swede default his fourth-round match, robbing him of the chance to win the only major tournament that has eluded him.

"I'm very disappointed. I wanted to do really well this year, especially after coming so close (second) last year," said Borg after he defaulted his match to Stockton 3-6, 6-4, 1-0. "This was the worst. It was much too painful to serve, and what can you do if you can't serve?"

Connors downplayed Borg's default. "He's out of the tournament? Oh," he deadpanned. Then he joked. "I got one round farther than he did, maybe I'm No. 1 on the computer now."

He was certainly No. 1 on the court Tuesday night when he devastated Roscoe Tanner, the No. 11 seed from Lookout Mountain, Tenn., 6-0, 6-2 in a match that took 55 minutes only because it takes time to change courts every odd game.

Connors and Stockton joined Manuel Orantes and Brian Gottfried Tuesday in advancing to the quarter-finals of the Open. Orantes, of Spain, the No. 5 seed who is playing marvelous tennis, easily handled 18-year-old John McEnroe of Douglaston, N.Y. 6-2, 6-3.

Royals nip Seattle 10-0

SEATTLE (AP) — Al Cowens has continued to take advantage of expansion club pitching, collecting five hits in one game for the second time this year as the Kansas City Royals trounced the Seattle Mariners 10-0.

"This is the biggest night in my career," he said after socking two homers, a double and two singles Tuesday night. "For one thing, this is the first time I've hit two homers in one game."

Cowens had his first five-hit game on June 1 in Toronto.

His two home runs Tuesday night boosted his total to 21 for the season. He drove in four runs and scored four times.

Meanwhile, three Kansas City pitchers — Paul Splittorf, 13-6, Randy McGilberry in his major league debut and Mark Littell — limited the Mariners to four hits, two by Juan Bernhardt.

Kansas City Manager Whitey Herzog said he replaced Splittorf after six innings because his "back's a little tender. There's no sense forcing it."

Cowens first homer well into the leftfield seats followed a run-scoring double by George Brett in the first inning. His second blast, after Brett was hit by a pitch in the third, chased Seattle starter Rick Honeycutt, 0-1.

"It was a fastball away and I just stayed with it," Cowens said. "That was my first one to right field this year.

"I don't pay any attention to the distance of the homers. I just get a thrill out of hitting them."

Cowens tallied again in the seventh when Amos Otis socked his 15th homer of the season off Seattle's Bob Galasso.

Kansas City picked up two more runs in the sixth on Fred Patek's fourth homer of the year and a wild pitch by Galasso, who had replaced Segui with runners on second and third.

Seattle's director of player operations, Lou Gorman,said the Royalsare going to be the American League champs.

"They can beat the Yankees or Boston."

Kansas City has won seven straight and 18 of its past 21 games.

"All we have to do is continue to win," Cowens said.

Gorman also said the Royals "might be a better team next year" with the addition of outfielder Clint Hurdle, one of the minor leagues' best players.

Gorman helped build Kansas City's club before moving to Seattle last year.

Johnny Duncan to appear at Bootheel Jamboree

BERNIE — Johnny Duncan a well known country and western recording star is scheduled to be the featured entertainer at the Bootheel Jamboree, here, Sept. 10. He is scheduled to give two shows, beginning at 6:30 p.m.

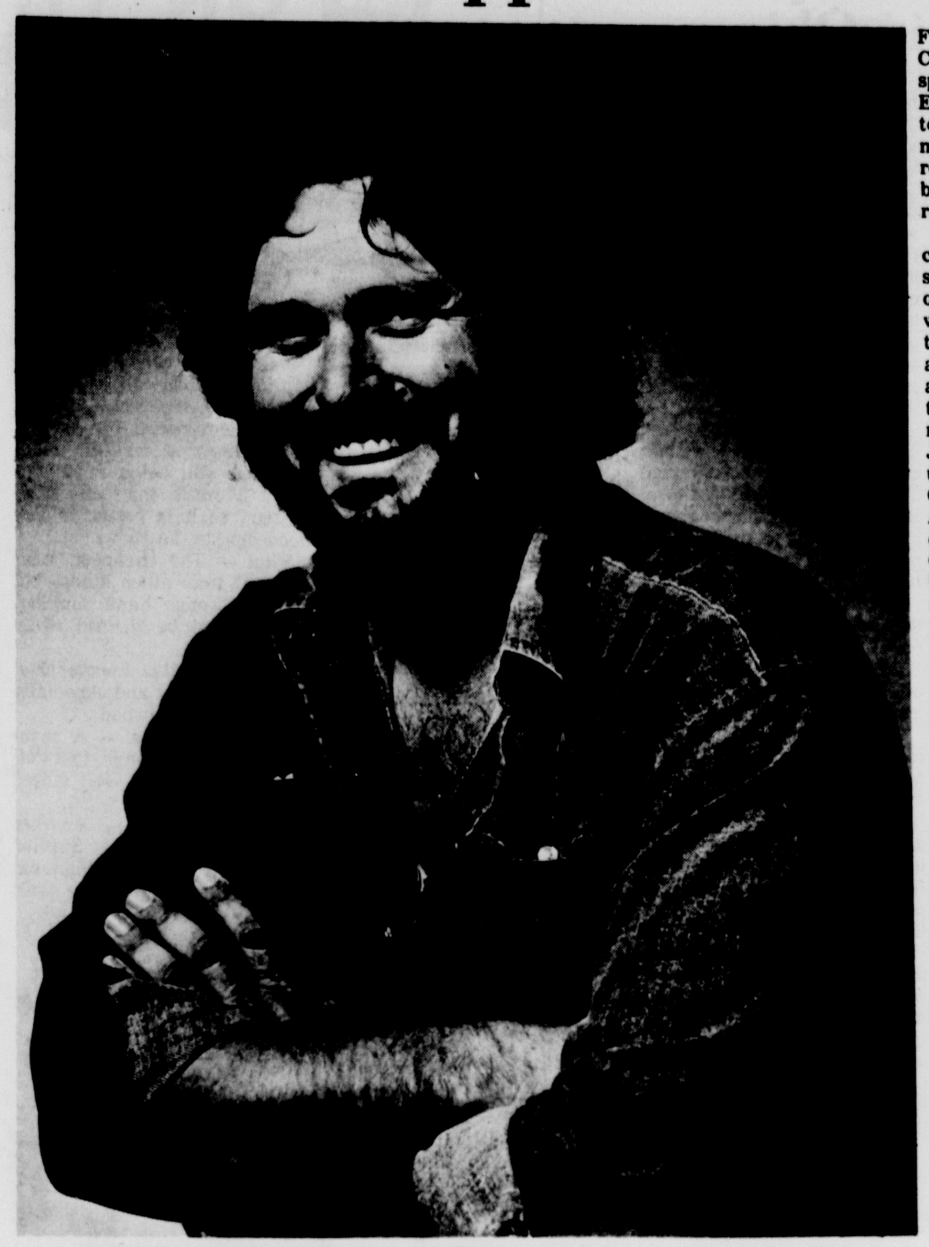
After nearly ten years as a Columbia recording artist, things were going just so-so for Johnny Duncan. There had been a couple of his records that were almost hits. He had had a few top-twenties, and a couple that reached the top-ten, but there was nothing really earth-shattering.

Then, in 1976, Johnny finally stumbled upon the right combination: a producer named Billy Sherrill, a girl singer named Janie Fricke, a song written by Kris Kristofferson called "Stranger," and a sizable quantity of Schlitz dark beer.

"Stranger" was the number one record in the nation for weeks during the Spring and Summer of 1976. Again, using the Billy Sherrill-Janie Fricke-Schlitz beer formula, Johnny went back into the studio in a relaxed frame of mind, and recorded "Thinkin' Of A Rendezvous," which also went to the number one. The same magic worked a third time with "it Couldn't Have Been Any Better," which also hit the number one spot.

In less than a year's time, Johnny Duncan has emerged after more than a decade of obscurity, to become one of the hottest commodities on the country music scene. "The main thing is that we found that groove, that tempo, that feel," Johnny explains. "You've got to find your groove and stay in it."

Johnny Duncan, who stands 6'4", and weighs in at 210 pounds, has often been noted for his "John Wayne physique," and his rugged looks. His eyes are deep-set and his slow drawl is punctuated with deep-throated chuckles. One female journalist wrote of Johnny: "He is of the stuff they write novels about. A tall, ruggedly handsome man, he likes his liquor, his women, and his songs." Underneath this rough-cut exterior, though, there's more. Johnny has a fascination with astrology ("My astrological number is six, and Friday is my lucky day."), and an underlying personal sensitivity. "When I go into a room," Johnny explains, "and I sense something is wrong, I think I'm to blame. I want to find out if I'm to blame."



Johnny Duncan

38-year-old Johnny Duncan grew up in Dublin, Texas. His mother taught him to play guitar by the time he was twelve. As a child, his idol was Chet Atkins, and years later, Johnny had a boyhood-dream-come-true when Chet recorded a song Johnny had written called "Summer Sunday."

There was a lot of music around when Johnny was growing up. Two of his childhood pickin' partners were his cousins, Jimmy and Danny Seals. Jimmy is now the Seals, of Seals and Croft; and Danny is now Dan England, of England Dan and John Ford Coley. "We used to have these country dances," Johnny recalls with a gleam in his eye. "They'd ice a No. 3 washtub full of Pearl beer, and they'd honk all night, my mother playing guitar, and my Uncle Ben Moroney on the fiddle."

In 1959, after spending some time at Texas Christian University where he studied English and Speech, Johnny moved to Clovis, New Mexico to work with Norman Petty, the man who discovered Buddy Holly and the Crickets, and Jimmy Gilmer and the Fireballs. Petty recorded Duncan in London and New York with a full contingent of harps and strings, but things just didn't go.

"I was recorded pop, which I'm not," Johnny declares. "My voice is smooth, but I'm country at heart."

After working as a DJ in the Southwest for several years, Johnny moved to Nashville in the early sixties. For two years he supported his wife and daughters by working as a bricklayer, and later as a DJ. Finally, one morning in 1966, Columbia's legendary Don Law spotted Johnny singing on Ralph Emery's early morning WSM television show and immediately offered him a recording contract. "It was the biggest day of my life," Johnny recalls.

With Columbia, Johnny's career began to pick up somewhat. He had a half-dozen or so chart records, beginning with "Hard Luck Joe," right up through "Jo And The Cowboy," and "Sweet Country Woman," along with several albums. In the meantime, Charlie Pride recorded a dozen or so of Johnny's songs, and from 1969 until 1972, Johnny opened on Charlie Pride's road shows. Afterwards, Johnny's recording career hit a slump. Although Columbia Records continued to believe in him, his records stopped hitting, and he spent two years singing in a dinner lounge in Bowling Green, Kentucky, 80 miles from Nashville. "We just couldn't get the answer," Johnny recalls, "we just didn't have the hit song ... The DJ's had known me since the late sixties, but we never seemed to put it together."

Finally one day, while traveling between Texas and Nashville, Johnny heard "the" hit song on his car radio. "I heard this song by Billy Swan, which was written by Kristofferson and I didn't know at the time that it was just an album cut. When I got back to Nashville, I was talking to Bob Beckham at Combine Music (Swan's and Kristofferson's publisher), and I said it sounded like Billy Swan had another smash with that song called 'Stranger.'

He told me it was just an album cut." Not long afterward, Johnny walked into Billy Sherrill's office and mentioned "Stranger." Billy nearly jumped out of his chair. "Stranger!?" he asked incredulously, "Why just now, somebody in New York called to tell me about that song!" In five minutes time, Sherrill was on the phone, calling musicians and organizing Duncan's next session.

The day of the session, Johnny showed up at the studio time, but Billy Sherrill told him to relax for a couple hours, and come back. So Johnny went to a local bar with a Schlitz dark beer tap, and followed his instructions to a tee. "I got more than relaxed," he recalls ... "I didn't intend to get wiped out (for the session)." Asked how the beer affected his singing, Johnny replied sheepishly, "All I have to say is it was the first time I ever recorded a number one record." Since then, when he is about to record, Johnny has been known to carry a six-pack of beer into the studio with him, just for good luck.

Though Johnny Duncan is, and always will be a Texan, he emphasizes that he wants no part of the outlaw movement. "Hell no, "I'm not an outlaw," he says. "These people are my friends, and I personally go out and buy their records, but that's just not me. I'm pretty conservative ... I'm no different now than when I was workin' out in the 110-degree sun, wearin' boots, blue jeans, and a work shirt."

Today Johnny resides outside Tolar, Texas in Brazos River cattle country. He lives with his three teen-aged daughters, Angie, Lezlie, and Lori. (His marriage of 16 years ended in divorce several years ago.) His house is situated on 57 acres of land. The farm's residents include a quarter-horse mare and three dogs. Although Duncan misses the creative cross-fire of the music scene in Nashville, and would like to move back there, he refuses to entertain the thought seriously. "The girls love the schools here," he says in total explanation, "so we'll stay based in Texas."

Johnny Duncan has lived the life he sings about; he's known the women. He's been through the pain of divorce, the loneliness of one-night stands, and the bitter-sweetness of romance both casual and serious. Johnny insists he won't sing a song if it doesn't "fit my lifestyle or reflect my personal opinions." He feels most at home with songs that are "not negative tear-jerkers, crying in your beer things ... basically positive things, but not your 'amazing love, get-up-in-the-morning, and leave-a-rose-on-the-pillow song either ... somewhere in-between." Johnny's deep, richly textured voice lends itself well to the themes he sings about. He's been compared to Ray Price and the late Jim Reeves, two men whom Johnny lists as his biggest influences.

Johnny Duncan's story reflects the magic of the music business. After over a decade of near-misses and obscurity, he has found the winning combination that has turned him into a thumbs-up, bona-fide country music star, who is now in demand across the country. The winning combination in this case is the beer (Schlitz), the producer (Billy Sherrill), the female accompanist (Janie Fricke), and most of all, the artist ... Johnny Duncan.

SCANNING YOUR HEART

This year more than one million Americans will suffer a heart attack, reports the American Heart Association, including many in the prime years of life.

Fortunately, because of recent advances, a large and increasing number of patients now survive a first and even a second heart attack—and a majority of these patients return to productive lives.

One significant advance in diagnosing possible heart trouble is a computerized, scanning gamma camera. Detailed clinical information which before could be obtained only with considerable patient time, trauma and expense may now be derived routinely, painlessly and at far less cost—on an out-patient basis.

Called the Baird-Atomic System Seventy-Seven, the camera can perform many studies, particularly of the heart, which were formerly impossible. It was developed by scientists at Baird-Atomic, a high-technology company that has made a major contribution in the field of medicine as well as other areas for more than 40 years.

The new camera has become an indispensable diagnostic tool in clinics throughout the world and has also become a means of encouraging cardiac care on a preventive medicine basis, in which an annual checkup of the heart will soon become as routine as a chest X-ray every year.

Haute couture comes cheaper in Budapest

By ERIC WAHA

BUDAPEST (AP) — In Communist Hungary, there is a dictatorship of fashion.

"We follow the Paris style absolutely," said Lilly Schleifer, one of the three women who have run Budapest's Salon Clara since the death of the legendary Clara Rothschild several months ago.

Clara Rothschild was the "big woman" of Hungarian fashion although she was tiny and frail.

In 1950, shortly after Communism came to power in Hungary, she gave her business away to the state with the understanding she could continue to run it.

The Salon Clara is still state-owned, but Mrs. Schleifer made clear that the trio running it would have little if any interference from the Communist government.

The other two women are Susan Toeroek and Magdalena Russai.

They said the Budapest women buying dresses at the Salon Clara had no opportunity to tone down the new Paris style, if they should think perhaps it was too extravagant or even daring.

"There is no compromise in haute couture," said Mrs. Schleifer, who said business was very good.

Customers include women from the United States, Britain, Canada, West Germany, Switzerland, Italy, Holland and Austria, among others.

Why should anyone from the West travel to Budapest to buy a haute couture dress there instead of at Paris or the top Italian fashion centers?

Though she refused to disclose any prices, she said, "For the money a woman spends in Paris for one dress, she can get two-and-a-half here."

Vaci Utca, where the salon is located, is Budapest's main business street. It is in the center of the city, not far from the big hotels.

Amendments may ban mousetraps in Ohio

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — When Ohioans go to the polls in November it appears they'll be voting on an amendment to the state constitution that would ban mousetraps.

The Ohio Committee for Humane Trapping, Inc., has tentatively qualified its proposal to ban leg-hold traps in the state as one of the amendment issues for the general election ballot.

The committee, headed by Sandy Rowland of Bowling Green, claims the traps are inhumane and cause "continuing, prolonged suffering" in both wild and domestic animals.

Mrs. Rowland said she was optimistic that the voters would approve the amendment in light of a poll which "indicates 74.9 per cent of the Ohio electorate favors" such a ban.

While there may be many Ohioans who want to outlaw the traps, some 50,000 state residents are licensed to trap and and their income from raw furs alone totals $9 million a year, according to the Department of Natural Resources.

"Economy is not my business, managing resources is," said wildlife division chief Dale Haney. "But there is a whole other picture involved" in such a ban.

The wildlife division feels that trapping "is essential to wildlife management," Haney explained. "And we view (the proposed ban) as a threat to our ability to manage the (wildlife) resource."

Mrs. Rowland calls leg hold traps "totally indiscriminate ... barbaric ... and unnecessary. There are other trapping devices that could and should be used."

The trouble is, it looks as if the amendment also would wind up outlawing the catching of birds for banding purposes and the use of the common, everyday home mousetrap. The language of the amendment proposal says it would be against the law to use any kind of trap that would cause "continuing, prolonged suffering."

Opponents point out that anytime you keep an animal against its will — in any kind of trap, including the sort Mrs. Rowland says should be used — it suffers for a continuing period of time — even if it's just 20 minutes.

The department will be putting up a fight. So will Ohioans for Wildlife Conservation, the Wildlife Legislative Fund and other organized sportsman's groups and interests.

The newest group, Ohioans for Wildlife Conservation, has some high powered backers — former U.S. Atty. Gen. William Saxbe, home in Mechanicsburg after a stint as U.S. Ambassador to India; Dan Galbreath, financier and sportsman, and pro golfers Tom Weiskopf and Ed Sneed..

Gov. James A. Rhodes hasn't taken a public stand on the issue. But as governor, he runs the natural resources department and the department is totally against the proposal. This indicates that the department has his tacit approval to oppose the ban.

Whether you do sanding with a power tool or by hand, the choice of the proper sandpaper has an effect on the quality of the result.

To make the right selection, it is necessary to know something about the kinds of material available and what their purposes are. Keep the following list handy so that when you have a finishing job to do, you can refer to it as a guide for choosing the best abrasive for the specific project.

Open-coated abrasive — The particles are spaced farther apart so that the sandpaper won't be clogging continuously. Generally used on rough work that tends to cause clogging.

Extra coarse — Mostly for removing paint and other old finishes.

Coarse — For smoothing out rough stock that is badly in need of sanding.

Medium — For smoothing out surfaces that have small scratches and slight imperfections.

Very fine — When the finishing instructions call for a light sanding between coats, this is the grade to use.

(Grading systems using numbers are still being used, but there is more than one such system, so it is better to buy according to the above list.)

Flint — The cheapest. Less efficient than other kinds, but good for rough hand sanding, since it can be thrown away when it clogs.

Garnet — Also inexpensive. Better than flint and especially effective on hardwood.

Silicon carbide — Another man-made product. Similar characteristics to aluminum oxide. Excellent for sanding glass and other hard materials.

Emery — For use on metal, although the previously mentioned two products are beginning to take over some of its functions.

Wet-or-dry — Has a waterproof backing so that it can be used when wet, considered an advantage for fine sanding by many professional finishers.

Sanding block — An object around which the sandpaper is wrapped when sanding by hand. Can be rubber, wood, metal or any other material. The more resilient the block, the more sensitive it is to precision sanding; a rubber block, for instance, is good for rounding the ends of wood.

(Do-it-yourselfers will find much valuable information in Andy Lang's handbook, "Practical Home Repairs," available by sending $1.50 to this newspaper at Box 5, Teaneck, NJ 07666.)

Stamps In The News

By SYD KRONISH

Collectors of the subject "cars on stamps" are excited about the new issue from Togo which hails the 100th anniversary of the birth of Louis Renault, famous automobile designer and manufacturer. The set of six stamps and a souvenir sheet features illustrations of classic old autos.

The 35 fr shows the Benz of Germany, 1894, with its open style design. The 50 fr depicts the De Dion Bouton of France, 1893, also featuring an open carriage design. The 60 fr pictures the Cannstatt-Daimler of Germany, 1899, predecessor of the Mercedes. The 70 fr has the Sunbeam of England,1904 model. The 100 fr displays the Renault of France, 1908 model. The highest value is the 200 fr which illustrates the Silver Ghost by Rolls Royce of England, produced in 1909. The souvenir sheet repeats the 100 fr and 200-fr designs and also shows Thomas Rickett's 1858 steam-driven auto.

Another new set of stamps highlighting the endangered animal species of its country has been issued by the West African Republic of Togo. These stamps bring special attention to major groups of African mammals and reptiles faced with extinction.

Featured on the stamps are the African slender-snouted crocodile, Nile crocodile, olive colobus, chimpanzee, leopard and West African manatee.

Silver Jubilee of Queen Elizabeth II's accession to the throne, is the last hurrah — the long-awaited set of four stamps from Britain's own post office. The release of the stamps coincided with the Jubilee Tour by the Queen started last May in Scotland. The tour ends in Londonderry on Aug. 11.

The new stamps are in values of 8.5 pence, 10 p, 11 p, and 13 p. Reminiscent of the 1935 Jubilee issue, the design is built around a portrait of the Queen. It is framed with the decorated initials "ER", the words "Silver Jubilee" and the dates "1952-1977." Each stamp differs only in the color and the detailed decoration of the initials.

The only other Royal Silver Jubilee stamp issue was in 1935 to celebrate 25 years of the reign of King George V.

Collector Always Has Time To Enjoy Clocks

"I can't think of any other field that has inspired more ingenuity, innovation and inventive genius than the making of timepieces," Martines says.

Beginning with a small boy's typical interest — and disaster — Martines came to be not only a clock fancier but a repairman, collector and dealer in antique pieces. He also distributes a newsletter to 500 other collectors.

"I like to think that in most cases I don't sell a clock, I 'place' it," Martines says. "A lot of people these days can afford fine old clocks but really don't appreciate them. I like to know that the people I do business with thoroughly appreciate and will give a good home to the clocks they purchase."

He was about 12 when curiosity about the family alarm clock caused it to explode in his hands. "I didn't know you had to take the tension off the spring before you disassembled the movement," he recalls.

He was just looking and admiring when he began exploring antique shops, because he had no money. "But as time went on, purely by long observation, I began to recognize the good from the bad, the jewels from the junk. You automatically begin to note detail in glass, furniture and clocks and differentiate the unusual from the usual."

His wife, Peggy, was responsible for his acquiring one of his noteworthy items, an elegant grandfather's clock priced at $700. He was a Cleveland school teacher at the time and put off looking at it in the shop because he knew he might fall in love with it despite the lack of money.

At last he put down $50 without the foggiest notion where he would get the rest but knowing that he would somehow. Ultimately he sold one of their two cars to pay for it.

"That's pretty much the philosophy you have to follow to acquire things you simply can't live without," he says.

"I probably know more about clockmakers of the last century than anybody in the country, because I made it my business," he says. "I can look at a clock and tell you what parts have been replaced and, in most cases, who made the replacement parts.

"A fine old clock is really the combining of many skills," Martines says. "The maker of the movement was rarely involved in any phase but that. Somebody else painted and decorated the face or dial, other artists did the reverse-painting-on-glass on the lower part of the doors. Still other specialists produced the wooden cases."

He left teaching to become a securities salesman but the firm folded and friends suggested he turn his clock hobby into a business.

"Every minute of my clock work is enjoyable," Martines says. "You meet no shallow people in this business.

"And the best part is that it's all here at home."

Recently, remains were found of a dinosaur, the Stokesosauraus clevelandi which is the first new genus and species discovered in 75 years. The World Almanac notes. The creature, fully grown at 13 feet in length and five feet in height, roamed the Utah region some 140 million years ago.

Deaths

J.C. Fowler

CHARLESTON – Judge Cletis Fowler, 66, a resident of the Host House, died at 3:30 p.m. Friday in Chaffee General Hospital, where he had been a patient since Aug. 31.

Born Feb. 10, 1911 in Bollinger County to the late Thomas Jefferson and Elsie Melissa Eaker Fowler, he worked as a service station attendant most of his life until retiring in 1968.

He had lived at the Host House since 1971, following the loss of both legs in a tree trimming accident.

Survivors include: His widow, Veda Fowler of Alton, Ill.; three sons, Cletus, Cleo and Doke Fowler of Wood River, Ill.; three daughters, Margie, Shirley and Linda, whose last names and addresses are unavailable; one brother, T. J. Fowler of Godfrey, Ill.; three sisters, Mrs. Opel Buttry of East Alton, Ill., Mrs. Lola Pate of Advance and Mrs. Othella Tanner of Puxico; and several grandchildren.

Friends may call at Amick-Burnett Funeral Chapel in Chaffee, where services are scheduled at 2 p.m. Thursday with the Rev. Jimmie Brewer, pastor of the Assembly of God Church at Advance, officiating.

Ruby Blankinship

CANALOU – Pallbearers at services conducted today for Ruby Blankinship, 67, who died Sunday, were Frank Hays, Odell Bishop, Shot Fraley, Earl Jones, Don Slaton and John Summers.

Liddy released from prison

DANBURY, Conn. (AP) — Watergate burglar G. Gordon Liddy, who served more time than anyone convicted in the case, was released from prison today on parole after 52½ months confinement.

Liddy, who served extra time because he refused to cooperate with Watergate prosecutors, walked to freedom from the medium-security Federal Correctional Institution at Danbury at 9:38 a.m., accompanied by his wife, Frances.

He faces an uncertain future with debts of more than $250,000.

Liddy took with him several cartons of belongings and two attache cases which were loaded into the brown Ford Pinto subcompact car for the drive to the Liddys' Oxon Hill, Md., home and a reunion with the couple's five teen-age children.

He maintained his ramrod posture and impervious stare as 50 reporters and photographers pushed in on him, asking whether he would now break his silence on Watergate "for a price."

Liddy stared straight ahead, grim-faced.

Asked where he was going, he replied: "East of the sun and west of the moon."

At another point, asked how he felt, he responded in German.

Earlier, Mrs. Liddy had said, "We're just looking forward to having him home."

Mrs. Liddy has maintained the household near Washington on her salary as an elementary schoolteacher.

"He's in good spirits, very strong, just the same as always," said Mrs. Liddy.

The one-time counsel to former President Richard Nixon's re-election committee has missed a lot during his prison term. His sentence of six years and eight months to 20 years was lengthened by an additional 18 months for his refusal to testify under immunity to a federal grand jury about Watergate. But last April, President Carter ordered the sentence shortened to a maximum of eight years, making Liddy eligible for parole.

He has turned 46. His oldest daughter, Sandy, was 13 years old when the aborted burglary at the Democratic National Committee headquarters in Washington took place in 1972. She is now 18, a student at the University of Maryland.

His attorney, Peter Maroulis, said Liddy looked forward to getting home and spending time with his family.

Reporters got a glimpse of Liddy on Tuesday when he was driven in shackles from Danbury by federal marshals to Williamsport, Pa., where he swore at a pre-release pauper's hearing that he was broke and unable to pay immediately a $40,000 fine that was part of his original sentence.

He appeared thinner than when he entered prison on Jan. 30, 1973. A beard he had grown in prison had been shaved, but he still had his moustache. His black hair was combed straight back.

"No comment," he said to a reporter who asked what his plans were.

Burglars take $200

Burglars took $200 from the Sonic Drive Inn, on South Main Street sometime Monday night or Tuesday morning, according to the Public Safety Department.

The money, mostly change, was taken from a desk. The burglars may have gotten into the building by breaking out a glass window pane in the back door and unlocking the bolt.

Council to set vote for chief

CARUTHERSVILLE – The date for a special election to fill the vacancy left by the resignation last week of Police Chief Jesse Johnson, is to be set during the city council meeting Thursday, according to a spokesman for Mayor B.G. Rogers.

The chief resigned Wednesday because of "too much harassment from the City Council and the newspaper here in town."

Rogers said six men have already begun circulating petitions for the special election, and that possible 8 to 10 candidates will be in the race before the filing deadline.

The mayor called Johnson "a good man. He's honest in every respect and a man of integrity. But he's had health problems that have given him a little trouble, and then we got into it with a little rash of burglaries and stuff like that. And the police committee was giving him some trouble about some of his men.

Rogers denied a statement by Ralph Clayton, general manager of The Pemiscot Journal and Democrat-Argus, that Johnson's resignation came in the wake of two closed council meetings last week.

Rogers also said the wave of burglaries that have plagued Caruthersville since the beginning of the year "have absolutely cooled off. After me telling the people to get their shotguns ready, it took hold. I'm still telling 'em to keep their shotguns ready, and I don't back up from what I tell you one inch."

Meanwhile, a source within the city government confirmed Thursday that six more burglaries have occurred in Caruthersville within the last week. The loot from the burglaries ranged from $100 in change to four Cadillac hubcaps to bags of potato chips. No arrests have been made.

The Golden Tree Snake can spring as high as four feet between tree branches and can glide through the air from bough to bough.

Motor vehicle accidents are the number one cause of death among Americans aged 15 to 24. Murder is the number two cause of death and suicide ranks third.

And most important, that the location of the school was set in published notices and board of education minutes. Any attempt now to change the location would invalidate the bond issue.

Supt. Sam Harbin said the bond issue is being presented to the public with about $50,000 going to the street and the utility lines. Any changes in the location would change the cost, he said.

Harbin said the Matthews family never sad the road had to be called Salcedo Road.

The city kept the name and worked out an agreement to move the road on the west siode of North Main Street north by about 60 feet so the intersection can be signalized at a later date.

Council members assured the Fuchs family that they would not approve future extensions of the road withouty considering the problem of access to the Fuchs propertyy.

But they also said they thought the property will be well served, with the road a block north of the property line. The Fuchs'es would only need to buy right-of-way for a block of street to Salcedo Road.

The council authorized issuing the remaining $100,000 in water treatment bonds.

The council approved the Gloth Subdivision, an 11 lot development on Ables Road between Crowe Place and Illinois Ave.

A budget adjustment was made reflecting the continuation of the Public Service Employment Act from Oct. 1 through Sept. 30, 1978. The city employs 10 people under the project. Funding for the program had been set to expire this month, but was extended another year by Congress.

satisfactory correspondent balances in determining whether to make the loans and in calculating the profitability of loans after they were made."

"In addition, there is some evidence tending to support the view that, but for the correspondent accounts, the loans would not have been made."

But Heimann said "we do not believe that the prosecution of any individuals warranted."

Heimann said that the business from Lance's bank may have been to the detriment of two other banks. He suggested that the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, which has jurisdiction over the other banks may want to investigate further. The other banks were the Northwest Georgia Bank in Ringgold and the Cohutta Banking Co. of Chatsworth, Ga.

Waterbed for needy baby gets attention

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Normal production halted at a Maryland waterbed factory last week as the plant filled a special order for a suffering Cape Girardeau, Mo., baby.

The baby, Drew Templeton, was born Aug. 22 with a skin condition known as icthyosis.

"It's a very dry skin disorder," a spokesman for Children's Hospital in St. Louis said. "After birth, the baby was brought to us and the condition was so bad that when nurses touched, cuddled or tried to treat the baby, it cried in pain."

Mrs. Mary Hakan, a hospital physical therapist, felt a waterbed might help and called a local waterbed retailer. The retailer called Classic Products of Beltsville, Md., and explained the hospital's need for a 24 inch by 13 inch waterbed.

"We attempt to stock these small waterbeds because we have been getting calls from children's hospitals, but when the call from St. Louis came, we didn't have any in stock," said Mrs. Carole Lann, Midwest regional manager for Classic Products.

Gun control poll

One of the major issues of the Carter administration is the quest for stricter gun control in the President's forthcoming crime control package. Reliable sources say that the 95th Congess and the Carter administration will be pushing for the control this year.

The questions provided below are for you to voice your own opinion on the gun control issue. Please answer each one and mail your response to the Daily Standard, 205 S. New Madrid, Sikeston, MO., 63801.

Responses will be tabulated and results of the poll will be published in the Daily Standard at a later date.

1. Should private ownership of Handguns be banned by federal law?
2. Should the sale of handguns be limited to two per person per year?
3. Should the sale of sporting guns be subject to stringent federal regulations?
4. Should gun owners be required to register their guns?
5. If guns are registered should the names and addresses of the registrants be made available to government agencies?
6. Do you belive the U.S. Constitution guarantees citizen ownership of handguns for personal protection?

CAMERA Angles

By IRVING DESFOR
AP Newsfeatures

The "1977 Kodak International Newspaper Snapshot Awards" (KINSA). This annual, summer-long photo contest is sponsored this year by 124 participating newspapers in the United States, Canada and Mexico. Amateur photographers may enter either black-and-white or color photographs through a newspaper. As in previous years, there's a $55,000 jackpot to be distributed among about 240 winners. Two grand prize winners — for the best color and the best black-and-white photo — each get an expense-paid trip around the world for two for one month or $5,000. Eight runners-up get other travel trips; ten Honor Awards receive $500 each; and more than 200 are selected for Special Merit prizes of $100 each. For further information, write: KINSA Awards, Contest Activities, Eastman Kodak, Rochester, N.Y. 14650.

"Images of Time: Past, Present and Future," a photo contest sponsored by Time magazine for U.S. amateur photographers. Only previously unpublished pictures in color or black-and-white are eligible. They compete for a Grand Prize of $1,000; a 2nd Prize of $500; and three 3rd Prizes of $250. The deadline is Sept. 1, 1977, and winning photos will be published in a special photography issue of Time on Nov. 28. We find one of its rules objectionable: "All pictures submitted will become the property of Time, Inc. They will not be returned to entrants." Normally, only winning pictures become the sponsor's property and others are returned provided a stamped, self-addressed envelope is included. If you shoot duplicate transparencies, you can avoid a total loss by entering this contest. For all the rules and special entry forms, write: Images of Time Photo Contest, Time & Life Building, Rockefeller Center, New York, N.Y. 10020.

"Creative Front Lens Accessory Photography Contest," sponsored jointly by Spiratone Inc. and Hall of Science of the City of New York. It's open to all photographers with entries in color or black-and-white and offers prizes valued at over $4,000 in merchandise. To qualify, pictures must be taken with some type of front lens attachment such as: prisms, diffusers, split-field lenses, cross screens, fisheye attachments, special effect filters or any homemade device. The deadline is Sept. 30, 1977, and prize-winners will be exhibited at the Hall of Science, Flushing Meadows, N.Y. Rules and special entry forms can be obtained by sending a stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Spiratone Photo Contest, P.O. Box 54103, Flushing, N.Y. 11354.

"1977 Scout Scholarship Awards," sponsored by Eastman Kodak. Boy Scouts from age 11 to 15 who have earned their photography merit badge are eligible. There are two categories: color and black-and-white. There are three scholarship prizes in each category consisting of U.S. Savings Bonds with maturity values of $1,000, $500 and $200. Other entries which demonstrate photographic excellence will receive certificates of merit. In addition, there's a Chief Scout's Executive Award of a $500 Savings Bond for the contestant with the best photograph portraying Scouting. The deadline for entries is Oct. 2, 1977. For rules and official entry forms, write: Scout Photo Scholarship Awards, Boy Scouts of America, North Brunswick, N.J. 08902.

"Picture Your World," a contest for amateur photographers sponsored by Photo Marketing Association International. There are three categories: Sports, Human Interest and Travel. Entries can either be in color or black-and-white but they will be judged together for each category. The prizes which winners in each category will aim for: American Airlines vacation packages for two in resort areas; Windjammer Cruises for two in the West Indies; or a share of $15,000 in cash provided by PMA. Each entry must be accompanied by an official entry blank available through participating photo retailers and photofinishers. The deadline is Oct. 31, 1977. For rules and location of your nearest participating dealer, write: PMA Picture Your World Contest, 603 Lansing Ave., Jackson, Mich. 49202.

Finally, follow these suggestions to give your photo contest entries the best possible advantage: 1. Read the rules carefully and follow them strictly. 2. Be your own tough judge first. Submit only those entries with visual impact, emotional appeal or significant content. 3. Make the best prints of which you are capable and as large as the rules allow. 4. Identify each print or transparency legibly with name and address. 5. Fill out entry blanks completely. 6. Include a stamped, self-addressed envelope if you wish to have non-winning prints returned. 7. Pack pictures protectively with cardboard, address envelope correctly and label it legibly: "Photographs — Do Not Bend" to ensure its arrival undamaged.

Here's wishing you all a stimulating, successful, snap-happy summer shooting season!

By ANDREW ROSENTHAL

The 51-year-old woman — also known as Eve White, Eve Black and by 19 other names — says she became aware of herself as an individual for the first time about three years ago, when her deeply submerged personality awoke from what amounted to a 40-year slumber.

During that period, she said, her life was ruled, to the chagrin and pain of those close to her, by personalities manufactured by her own injured psyche.

Mrs. Sizemore was one of the world's most celebrated cases of multiple or fragmented personality. Her story gained popular attention from the film, "The Three Faces of Eve," which was inspired by the writings of her first psychiatrist, Dr. Corbett Thigpen.

As part of a long therapy with Dr. Tony Tsitos, she has written her own story, 20 years after the film was made, one year after she saw it for the first time. "I'm Eve" was coauthored by Mrs. Sizemore's cousin, Elen Sain Patillo.

In an interview in her New York hotel room, Mrs. Sizemore talked about her strange past, about her lives as Eve White, the Strawberry Girl, the Bell Lady, the Freckle Girl and others, all named for a character quirk manifested during their period of domination.

She recounted the circumstances of what seems to be her ultimate recovery.

"It was at the death of the Retrace Lady," she recalled of her final "face." "It was the 19th of June in 1974, by the way. I remember the exact instant.

CHRIS SIZEMORE

"When she died, there I was. Almost instantaneously, I was ready to create another one (personality). I felt so alone and terribly afraid."

Mrs. Sizemore said her fear was mixed with relief. At last, the woman who emerged seemed to be an adult version of the tortured child who had shut herself off from the world long ago, in a tiny North Carolina town, after a traumatic series of violent incidents.

Although Mrs. Sizemore and her doctors are certain that she is a healthy, whole person now, it was not the first time it had looked as though her life would resume a more normal course. After two years with Thigpen and Dr. Hervey Cleckley, in 1954 they had been satisfied that a final integration had taken place, Mrs. Sizemore said.

She then married Don Sizemore, her present husband, and tried to settle into a life of domesticity. But her problems reappeared, along with blinding headaches, fainting spells and amnesia.

"We were led to believe when we got married that all I had to do was love Chris and everything would be all right," her husband said. But then it started again.

"We didn't know when the next one was going to happen so I just learned to live with it," he continued.

Learning to live with it, he said, meant waking up one morning to a terrified woman who claimed she'd never seen him before. And it meant dealing with periods of blindness and muteness, too.

"I was so ashamed," said Mrs. Sizemore, making a tent of her fingertips and settling into a deep chair. She spoke calmly and with self-assurance, her round face creasing often into a smile.

"I thought I shouldn't be alive. I thought someone with a thing like that inside them didn't deserve to live."

But Mrs. Sizemore said she gradually came to understand herself. And when the Retrace Lady "died" she was sure her nightmare was over. For the first time, she's absorbed the memories of all the women and is "learning to deal with life differently," she said.

Mrs. Sizemore said she was starting to enjoy herself again. "I see things I've never seen before," she said. "Like bees on a leaf or grains of sand.

"That sounds so corny, I know, but it's true. I've been so busy existing, I haven't had time to live."

Monte Carlo Story Is A Sure Winner

THE MONEY SPINNER: Monte Carlo And Its Fabled Casino. By Xan Fielding. Little, Brown. 205 Pages. $8.95.

Contrary to the old song, there never was a man who broke the bank at Monte Carlo.

But there was a man who almost did. His name was Charles Deville Wells. As Xan Fielding observes in "The Money Spinner," "To break the bank would have meant emptying the reserves of all the gaming tables at once; an impossible feat for any single player or even for a large syndicate with unlimited means. But to break one table once in a lifetime was memorable enough; several times in one day was more remarkable still. To do so several days running was a never-to-be-forgotten event."

And that's what Wells did. His remarkable story as well as numerous other entertaining, informative anecdotes stud the text of this well-written, well-researched informal history of Monaco and the casino of Monte Carlo.

It has had its ups and downs since opening, and they are carefully detailed in this book as Fielding spins out a most absorbing tale of what life was like in Monte Carlo then and now.

BOOK REVIEW

This first novel concerns the emotional trauma, and adjustments, of a man going blind. In the case of this particular man, however, the degeneration of his sight is compounded because of people and circumstances.

The story concerns Paul Held, a professor at a New York college who finds himself about to fulfill a dream and marry the woman he loves, the wife of his best friend, who is dying of cancer.

Unfortunately, when his dream is about to come true after his friend's death, Held is injured in an auto accident and loses the sight of one eye. The remaining good eye undergoes a rapid deterioration. Thus his dilemma: Should he tell the woman he loves about his condition? She already has borne the agony of having a spouse suffering from a lengthy terminal illness. Also it is the final year in which he is to get teacher tenure and it might not be granted if he is incapacitated and unable to teach. And he is torn between his true love and a special relationship with a young student who has helped him through his trauma of going blind.

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Can you tell me the cause of aphthous ulcers in the mouth? Are they contagious? Can you suggest a reliable cure for such an ulcerated condition? What are the chances of a recurrence?

DEAR READER — As you know these are commonly called canker sores. I'm afraid we are not much better off in treating them than we are in dealing with the common cold.

The truth is we don't know what causes them, although there are several theories offered as an explanation. Some claim they are an allergy, others an immune response — which means that the body becomes allergic to part of its own tissues, in this case the tissues in the mouth. Still others think a virus is involved.

It follows that there is no good treatment. The best approach is to keep the mouth clean. Your doctor may want to coat the area with some relatively insoluble substance to protect it and promote healing. A new substance, Proxigel, is sometimes used for this purpose. Sometimes coating the area with silver nitrate helps. In any case they usually go away in a couple of weeks — and they return.

Any focus of irritation in the mouth such as ill-fitting dentures or a tooth out of line should be corrected. Some people do better avoiding certain foods, such as citrus fruits. Regardless of what is done, about a fifth of the population suffers from these unpleasant ulcers in the mouth at any one time. They apparently are not contagious.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I have two moles on my face which have never given me a problem. The last six to eight months I've been getting pimples right next to them. The moles become very sore, swell and are very irritated.

One mole has changed just slightly in color and in size. Is this normal, or should I be concerned? I'm in my late 20s and have a fairly good complexion. What could cause a pimple under a mole?

DEAR READER — Let me say at once, regardless of how old or young you are, if you ever have a mole that changes in any way get to the doctor as fast as you can and let him look at it. A changing mole can be a malignant melanoma, one of the more dangerous cancers, and it is quite different from the more harmless skin cancers. A change in color or size or in any other aspect of appearance is an indication to run to the nearest doctor.

A mole that is irritated for any reason is more likely to become malignant. Pimples tend to form where there are hair follicles. Since hair follicles are near or even in a mole you can have this happen. It is one way of causing irritation.

I have had a few people go to the doctor and get an early diagnosis of malignant melanoma because they have read this column. Their prompt action may have saved their lives. So, if you have a mole and it changes in any way don' just sit there, have it examined!

Greta Garbo now feels her life wasted

BONN, West Germany (AP) — Greta Garbo, who withdrew from public life 30 years ago, now feels she has lived a lonely, wasted life and "it's too late to change it," a West German magazine reports.

In what it claims is the 72-year-old Swedish movie queen's first interview since leaving the public scene, Bunte Illustrierte magazine quoted her as saying, "I have messed up my life. And it's too late to change it."

The magazine article said she spoke to a reporter who met her at a mutual friend's apartment in Klosters, a town in Switzerland's Graubuenden area.

She lives two summer months every year in a small furnished apartment in Klosters, where she reads, sleeps and waits — "I really don't know for what," Miss Garbo was quoted as saying.

The article described her as going for long walks even in rainy weather, her graying hair gathered in the nape of her neck by a rubber band, hatless and with her face devoid of cosmetics except a trace of lipstick.

She likes going to theater and opera in New York, where she lives most of the year.

HOME DESIGN
By Larry Farnsworth

Here's an attractive house featuring living areas on two levels with a garage on a third, lower level. It not only thus adapts well to available lot space and contour, but also adds drama to the highly practical floor plan.

Note the exterior details first — the charming effect of the stucco siding and brick combination, as well as the overall good looks created by the variation in house levels.

Inside, the big living room gains drama both from the deck just outside, and the unique view — over the railing — of the dining room on the higher level at the back of the house.

Beyond the dining room, stretching out at the rear of the house on this same level, are the practical kitchen, with its efficiently planned, U-shaped work area particularly well supplied with counter and storage space, and the large, pleasant family room, just across the handy counter.

Before shifting attention to the bedroom area of this model, take another look at the front entry, giving special notice to that well placed powder room. And note, too, the good looking effect of the railinged off family room as seen immediately upon entering this home.

Here are two bedrooms at the back, and an attractive master bedroom at the front. Afforded maximum privacy because of its higher level, and boasting its own private deck, it also has a separate bath, flanked by a pair of roomy closets, and a big walk-in closet as well.

Social Security ills pose dilemma for Congress

WASHINGTON (AP) — Social Security pays benefits to 33.3 million persons and collects taxes from 108 million workers and their employers. It's also running out of money.

But Congress has no intention of letting benefits to the elderly, disabled, widows and dependents be cut off or reduced.

It will start in earnest on the business of finding the needed money Sept. 12, when the House Ways and Means Social Security subcommittee begins putting together new financing legislation.

Witnesses already have described the uneasiness of the retired about the future of the system. Active workers, who in many instances are paying more in Social Security taxes than in income tax — up to $965.25 this year and probably $1,070.85 next year — worry that the load may become back-breaking and still leave them with no assurance of security in old age.

Since 1975 Social Security has been paying out more than it receives from the payroll taxes levied to support it.

It has been drawing down its reserves to keep up the payments. Latest estimates are that, if nothing were done, the trust fund for payments to those who retired for disability would be exhausted by late 1978 or early 1979 and current receipts would be insufficient for payments.

The corresponding fund for those who retired for age, and for their dependents, is not projected to last beyond about 1983 unless replenished.

Everyone agrees Social Security's financial problem is real and serious and that Congress must act quickly during the waning months of its 1977 session. But the agreement stops there.

The lawmakers are faced with what is always one of their most painful decisions: Who will pay?

Any tax increase runs counter to the efforts of President Carter and the Democratic majority to stimulate the lagging economy, while any additional spending not covered by taxes enlarges the deficit, threatens Carter's goal of budget balance by 1981, and may retard the growth of business confidence needed to provide job-building private investment.

Carter sent Congress early this year a package of proposals desivned to see Social Security through its immediate financial pinch and make a start toward solving longer range problems that could cause the system even greater difficulties after the year 2000.

But at least one of the major elements in Carter's package is in deep trouble in Congress and no consensus on alternatives is in sight.

In times of unemployment, payroll tax receipts fall below estimates. Disbursements go up because more people retire early, and under existing law inflation automatically boosts the payments.

The trust funds are designed to carry the system over temporary slumps. The long economic woes of the 1970's proved them inadequate.

In 1970 the size of the trust funds were equal to a year's disbursements. By the beginning of this year they had fallen to half that and were continuing to decline.

Additionally, for reasons not fully understood, retirements for disability have outrun projections.

There are two major reasons for Social Security's longer-range problems, that could come to a head about 2010 unless corrected.

One is the changing age mix of the U.S. population. There are now about three workers to one beneficiary. In the next century the ratio may be two to one, meaning a bigger drain on each wage earner to help support the pensioner.

The other long-range threat to the system, one easier to pinpoint and correct, is a faulty formula for computing the future benefits of persons presently working.

In effect, it compensates twice for inflation. Unless changed, it could permit retirees by the year 2000 to draw benefits higher than their best working-year earnings.

In addition, there are anomalies and inequities in the system that call for reform, especially provisions widely regarded as unfair to women. The courts already have mandated some changes.

Congress certainly will not cure all of Social Security's ills this year or next.

It may well tackle the job in three installments — a quick temporary fix, perhaps involving borrowings among the various trust funds or from the Treasury; more substantial refinancing legislation, perhaps next year; thorough reform left to future congresses.

Carter's package addressed principally Social Security's short-range financing problems.

The administration's most controversial proposal is to transfer over the next three years $14.1 billion of general revenues — essentially the proceeds of the income tax — to the Social Security trust funds.

The shift would be intended to compensate for payroll tax receipts lost because unemployment has remained above 6 per cent since 1975. Whether such transfers would be permanently authorized whenever unemployment exceeded 6 per cent was left open for future study.

In a test vote, the Senate finance committee split 11 to 3 against the proposal.

The proposed transfer came under immediate and heavy fire not only from business groups, Republicans, some former Social Security officials and some economists, but also from the two congressional committee chairmen who will have most to do with the legislation. These are Rep. Al Ullman, D-Oe., of Ways and Means, and Sen. Russell B. Long, D-La., of Senate Finance.

The AFL-CIO and major organizations of older Americans generally support the administration package, including the transfer. Some economists agree. Chairman James A. Burke, D-Mass., of the Social Security subcommittee has long advocated a regular contribution of general funds.

Ullman and Long have taken the position that so long as the government as a whole is operating in the red, it is poor policy to cover one deficit by increasing another.

Both have said more revenues will have to be found for Social Security, if not by increasing the payroll tax, then by finding some new source. Both have suggested that a value added tax — a form of national sales tax — may be worth considering.

The argument about using general revenues for part of the cost of Social Security is as old as the system. Most of the other industrialized countries with similar systems do so.

When the U.S. plan was being developed in President Franklin D. Roosevelt's administration, use of general revenue money was considered. The decision, however, was to rely on a payroll tax imposed equally on employers and employes.

Congress generally has held to that principle over the decades. It has increased the tax as the system has expanded to cover more people and provide greater benefits.

General revenues have been added only for special, limited purposes, and for the government's part of the Medicare doctor bill coverage.

The yield of the payroll tax can be enlarged by increasing the rate, raising the ceiling on wages subject to tax, or both.

The rate, now 5.85 per cent each on employes and employers, will go to 6.05 per cent Jan. 1 even if the law is not changed. The maximum wage base, now $16,500, will be increased next year, probably to $17,700.

Boosting the payroll tax yield by raising the ceiling on taxable earnings has appeal in Congress because it does not increase the burden on lower paid employes, while a rate raise hits everyone.

But since only about 15 per cent of workers earn more than the taxable maximum, the Congressional Budget Office estimates, it would take an increase of 63 per cent in the ceiling to raise as much revenue in the next six years as a 1 per cent increase in the combined employer-employe rate.

He would by stages, beginning in 1979, eliminate the ceiling so far as the employer's tax is concerned, so that by 1981 the employer would be paying on his entire payroll.

The ceiling on earnings for the employe's tax would be raised in four steps, beginning in 1979, so that by 1985 the projected ceiling would be $30,300.

Carter's package contains other tax changes.

Present law contemplates an increase in the payroll tax rate of 1 per cent each on employes and employers in the year 2011. The administration would advance the change, putting one quarter of it into effect in 1985 and the other three-quarters in 1990.

The administration also proposes restoring the tax rate on self-employed persons to one and one-half times the employe rate. It has fallen in recent years to about one and one-third times.

The package also includes a new benefit formula to eliminate the double adjustment for inflation. Those already retired would not be affected and those retiring soon only minimally. The principle is unopposed, but there is some disagreement as to the exact formula.

If all its programs are adopted, the administration told Congress, the trust funds will have adequate balances by the end of 1982 and the system will be safely financed well into the next century.

Labor leadership power shifting to new breed of union official

WASHINGTON (AP) — The American labor movement is undergoing a managerial revolution that has produced the most sweeping leadership changes since the 1940s, with power passing to a new breed of union official.

AFL-CIO President George Meany still dominates the giant labor federation, but for the first time his legislative lobbying and political tactics are being challenged. Some of the new, younger union presidents have even urged him publicly to retire.

"He's 83 and he should get out and let somebody a little younger and a little closer to us get on with it," says the outspoken William W. Winpisinger, newly elected president of the International Association of Machinists. At 53, he is 30 years younger than Meany.

Death and retirement in the last three years have brought to power a new generation of leaders in the construction trades, the clothing unions and more than a dozen major industrial unions.

This year alone, the nation's three largest industrial unions — the machinists, the auto and steelworkers — elected new leaders. By year's end, only two of the 33 union presidents who make up the AFL-CIO's policy-making executive council will have served on the council longer than eight years.

The new leaders generally are younger and better educated than the old-timers of labor's rough and tumble days. Several have law degrees. They are also, for the most part, more liberal politically and more militant in their attitude toward organizing new members.

"Today's labor leader is far better equipped to handle the tough economic issues that come up at the bargaining table, and they know how to read a profit and loss statement or a computer printout," says Al Zack, the AFL-CIO's long-time spokesman. And, he adds, "They all read the Wall Street Journal."

But Zack and other observers think the new group of leaders will have more impact on style than on substance.

"The changes are not as apt to be as dramatic as some people think because the basic fundamentals of wages, hours and working conditions will still be the fundamentals," says another labor veteran.

The building trades unions, traditionally the labor movement's most conservative element, are beginning to show change under new leaders.

Long criticized for their exclusionary policies, the craft unions are actively recruiting minorities and women. They also have begun easing restrictive work practice rules to become more competitive with nonunion contractors who are taking a larger share of building jobs.

New leadership in the needle trades has given new life to these unions, now campaigning to organize Southern textile factories and restrict clothing imports that have caused the loss of American jobs.

The emergence of Winpisinger, Douglas Fraser of the auto workers, Glenn Watts of the communications workers and Lloyd McBride of the steelworkers is likely to give new strength to labor's liberal wing.

They believe organized labor should shed its "middle-class image" and focus attention once again on broad economic and social policy issues.

"If you're going to rally support behind your programs you're going to have to show concern not only about your members but all the people in our society," says the 60-year-old Fraser.

"You've got to prove to the people of this country that the labor movement is concerned about all the people, not just those who happen to be paying dues into the labor organizations."

But until and unless Fraser can bring his union back into the AFL-CIO, he will have no say on federation policy. The UAW left the AFL-CIO in 1968 in a policy and personality dispute between Meany and Walter Reuther, who was then UAW president.

Fraser, a political liberal who rose through his union's ranks after going to work as a metal polisher in a Chrysler Corp. plant, favors reaffiliation on the grounds that a united labor movement is in the best interest of workers. But there is strong opposition within the UAW, in part because of rank-and-file objection to Meany's continued leadership.

The AFL-CIO's Zack rejects the criticism from the new leaders and young union members. He contends that, under Meany, the labor federation is already "liberal and leftist" and notes that it led the fight in Congress for the Civil Rights Act. And now, Zack adds, the AFL-CIO is in the forefront of the battle for a higher minimum wage and the establishment of a national health insurance program.

Within the past year, perhaps in response to pressure from the new union presidents, the AFL-CIO has become more aggressive toward organizing new members and has made reform of federal labor law to ease organizing its No. 1 legislative priority.

As for Meany, there had been speculation that he would retire this year. But, with his health improved after recent ailments, he now says he will seek another two-year term at the AFL-CIO convention in December. He is not likely to be opposed.

Hill couple teaches folk arts and crafts

KELLEN HOLLOW, Ky. (AP) — Want to learn how to make a dried apple doll, play the harmonica, forecast the weather by crows, or how to cure snake bite with a home remedy?

Then head for the hills.

The hills of northeastern Kentucky is where you'll find John and Mary Lozier practicing and teaching the arts of Applachian life passed down to them from their parents and grandparents.

The Loziers still live pretty much like their parents did before them on their 35-acre farm tucked away in the hills of Greenup County.

Each weekend, they play host and teachers to a group of Ohio State University students taking a course on Appalachian Folklore under the university's Creative Arts Program.

"They come down and we talk to them about the old arts and crafts," said Mrs. Lozier. "They stay two days and I do the cooking."

The students are treated to hearty hill dishes — fried dried apple pie, corn bread, biscuits, fried sausage and Mrs. Lozier's own canned vegetables and fruits.

The kitchen of the farmhouse, built before the turn of the century, has been modernized with an electric stove and running water but the cooking is still that of an earlier era.

Her 68-year-old husband is the expert on farming the hard way with a small hand plow and a hoe. He's also the music expert, using his harmonica to play the rollicking tunes and ballads of an earlier time. Sometimes Mrs. Lozier, 63, sings along with the music. The two have performed on OSU's Columbus, Ohio, campus several times.

"I have an eighth grade formal education and my husband has about a fourth grade," said Mrs. Lozier. "I went to school in a one-room schoolhouse in Rock Creek that had eight grades," she added.

Despite the absence of formal education, the couple keep the college students spellbound with knowledge they've acquired.

"They seem very interested. Theynd the ones that have medicinal value," said Mrs. Lozier, who has raised five sons of her own.

"We do a lot of the things we do because we do it the way our parents did it, but there's a scientific reason behind most of it," she said.

FAIR WARNING is ignored by a fellow who can't resist a peak at what's going on beyond the fence — which turned out to be a baseball season opener. But who knows? It might have been something as startling as (below) . . .

By PAUL STEVENS
Associated Press Writer

CHANUTE, Kan. (AP) — The rolling hills of southeast Kansas are 8,000 miles and another world removed from East Africa, but a bit of the Dark Continent's heritage is preserved in a two-story, converted railroad building in downtown Chanute.

The Safari Museum is a tribute to Martin and Osa Johnson, an adventurous Kansas couple who became world famous as explorers, photographers, authors and naturalists during the early part of this century.

Its artifacts draw 7,000 to 8,000 visitors each year into the unimposing structure nestled among downtown businesses and the Santa Fe Railroad freight warehouse.

"People are very surprised to find this right in the middle of Kansas," said Dorothy Wilson, an assistant at the museum. "But they're pleasantly surprised and I hope they pass it on."

The museum, one of five in Kansas accredited by the American Association of Museums, opened in 1961 in a building donated by Santa Fe to the city.

Neither of the Johnsons lived to see its creation. Martin Johnson died in a plane crash in 1937 and Osa died of a heart attack in 1953.

"They apparently had an agreement whereby whichever one of them died last, that side of the family inherited the collection," Mrs. Wilson said. "Osa died last and her mother got the things."

Osa's mother, Mrs. Belle Leighty, who died here in 1976 at the age of 99, gave the Johnsons' collection to the city with the stipulation that it be publicly displayed.

Martin Johnson was living in Independence, Kan., when in 1907 at the age of 21 he got the chance to travel around the world with author Jack London on London's yacht, "The Snark." In assembling a crew, London advertised for a ship's cook. Johnson applied and got the job, but he was said to have spent the entire summer learning to cook.

After the trip, Johnson returned to Independence for a short time and was married to Osa Leighty of Chanute. They soon began their travels to East Africa and the South Seas in earnest.

"I think Martin had a premonition things were going to change, that there would soon come a time when animals would no longer be free and roaming," Mrs. Wilson said.

The Johnsons began preserving the undisturbed sanctuary of animal life and primitive peoples on film, producing 10 full-length movies. They also were active writers. Johnson's first book, "Through the South Seas with Jack London," was published in 1913.

Johnson wrote a total of eight books and Osa wrote 10, many of them after her husband's death. The museum has copies of all the books and it is working to obtain prints of the motion pictures.

A reminder that the couple was also active in safari hunting is preserved on a wall of the museum — a blanket made from the skins of 12 leopards.

Many ecology-minded visitors become mildly upset by the display, Mrs. Wilson said. "But they did that in 1922, we tell them," she said. "But they say, 'Oh, yes, but 12 animals?' The Johnsons also trapped some animals and sold them to zoos, including five cheetahs they sold to the St. Louis Zoo."

Among the exhibits in the museum are a South Seas Devil-Devil, Masai hunting spears and shields from East Africa, and portraits of primitive African peoples and cannibals from the South Seas.

Mrs. Wilson said one of the most popular exhibits was a collection of African artifacts donated by Dr. Pascal Imperato, health commissioner of New York City and a former physician in Mali.

More than 200 masks, statues, musical instruments, household items and religious objects from more than 30 tribal groups are contained in the collection on the second floor of the museum. The display was officially opened in 1974.

Museum director Keith Bolwahn said he hoped to further open the museum's facilities to researchers and also planned a traveling exhibit to introduce Kansans to the museum.

SCHOOLROOM TURNED NEST for a machine gun is now a playground for youngster in Majdelaya, Lebanon. Building was heavily damaged during fighting. UNICEF has announced plans to assist in rebuilding damaged schools.

Today in U.S. History

By The Associated Press

Today is Wednesday, September 7th, the 250th day of 1977. There are 115 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1940, German bombers began the World War II raids against London which were to become known as the "London Blitz."

On this date:

In 1533, England's Queen Elizabeth I was born.

In 1822, Brazil declared independence from Portugal.

In 1825, the French hero of the American Revolution, the Marquis de Lafayette, said his last farewell to President John Adams at the White House.

In 1930, work began on Boulder Dam, now known as Hoover Dam, on the Colorado River.

Ten years ago: A White House panel recommended the establishment of a new federal bank to lend money to qualified students for college education, with 30 to 40 years to pay.

One year ago: A Soviet pilot who flew a Russian MIG-25 to Japan was granted political asylum in the United States.

Thought for today: All the world's a stage and all the men and women merely players — William Shakespeare.

Andy Griffith hoping films lead to series

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Think of Andy Griffith and you may think of a good old boy who'd rather loaf than labor. But lately he's been busier than a flute player's upper lip during the William Tell Overture.

Last night, the country boy who sprang to fame as a rustic sheriff on CBS for eight years popped up as President of the United States in the openinv stanza of ABC's "Washington: Behind Closed Doors."

And last week, he was at MGM, finishing the second of two TV movies — playing Abel Marsh, a gunless sheriff at a California lake resort — in what he hopes will become a one-hour weekly series on NBC.

Griffith, 45, a tall, surprisingly intense native of Mt. Airy, N.C., said his new venture is the third version of an idea he's been hot on for several years, a rural cop show featuring both humor and mystery.

He said the first version aired on ABC about three years ago — with him in it — as a movie called "Winter Kill." He wanted to make it a series but the network didn't.

Despite high ratings, he said, "they choose not to have it on the air (as a series) because it showed earth instead of asphalt.

"They were afraid — because I have a Southern accent and the show was set in a small town — that right away it was 'Green Acres' or 'Petticoat Junction.'"

Things moldered until a writer, Lane Slate, did a similar show about a lake resort sheriff, a James Garner movie called "They Only Kill Their Masters," Griffith said.

Then, he added, he and his long-time partner, Richard O. Linke, consulted with Slate, struck a deal with both Slate and NBC to make two Sheriff Abel Marsh movies, and began filming at Big Bear, Calif.

Griffth spoke of all this while consuming commissary eats with Linke, an MGM press agent and a visiting scribe.

He also discussed with Linke assorted battle plans to publicize his Sept. 20 film, including an appearance on the Dinah Shore show, a five-city tour and 33 telephone interviews in three days. Hope also was expressed a booking on NBC's "Today" show could be arranged.

Griffith, who seemed a bit harried, said all this concentrated drum-beating was necessary. The air date of his first "Abel" had been moved up a month, shortening the time he has to urge folks to watch it.

If a lot of folks watch it, NBC could order it as a series. And a series is definitely what the tall Tarheel wants to do.

The star of the successful "Andy Griffith Show" and unsuccessful "New Andy Griffith Show" grinned when reminded that TV's oldest cliche is that of the exhausted star vowing never to do another series.

"Well, I thought that at one time," conceded the broad-shouldered ex-high school teacher. "But all actors, when they're working real hard, don't want to work.

"But when they're not working, they want to work. We're all that way."

Even greenhorn can win as casino dealer

RENO, Nev. (AP) — You'd think Harold's Club was taking a big chance, letting a greenhorn deal blackjack with the casino's money. But it's clear now even a beginner can sustain what everyone should know: the odds are with the house.

After two hours, the table had about as much money as when the novice began dealing — $3,000 or so.

One thing's for sure. The world of the casino is different from the dealer's side of the green felt table. The noise melts away, the room seems smaller and time is not important. And dealing cards to customers anxious to win big money is not at all like dealing a poker hand to the boys Saturday night.

When Harolds Club, one of Reno's oldest casinos, tossed out the challenge — deal, with their money — at the club one afternoon, well, who could pass it up?

First there was a crash course on dealing — covering things like the shuffle, doubling down, splitting cards, table etiquette and more.

You think you know how to deal 21? Try it with five people staring at you. The palms sweat, the cards clump as they're shuffled or buckle under pressure.

Nevertheless, the greenhorn stumbles through four shuffles, strips the deck, turns it, let a player cut. Then he burns the top card, checks the bets and deals.

Professionals run through the procedure in seconds. It took your novice longer.

After two hours' dealing, the shoulders were stiff, the eyes strained, the body moist and the mind filled with a new appreciation for what thousands do daily.

Several veteran gamblers — they looked that way — played only a single hand at the beginner's $1 table. Others, told what was going on, stayed.

They got a kick out of it, and as assistant floorman Bill Parga watched, correcting mistakes, the players learned some things they weren't aware of. Parga, for example, spread a new deck on the table, explaining it must be checked front and back for irregularities.

"Sometimes we get two aces of the same suit or a card with a name other than Harolds on the back," he said.

"That's so the deck is always changed, just in case someone is marking," Parga replied.

Watch a dealer some time, notice how smoothly he or she picks up the bet or pays it, then deftly gathers the cards to the discard tray.

The greenhorn tried. Cards went one way, money another. The money was miscounted, a bet or two mispaid. But Harolds' money was safe — Parga was there.

Grover Cleveland

Grover Cleveland is ranked, according to a ruling by the State Department, as both the 22nd and 24th President of the United States. He is the only Chief Executive to have served two nonconsecutive terms. First elected in 1884, he was defeated for reelection in 1888 by Benjamin Harrison, although he led in the popular vote. He ran against Harrison again in 1892 and won.
